This account of the activities of The Penn Club, accompanied by illustrations of the men and women who have honored the Club by their presence at the receptions tendered them from 1875 to 1923, inclusive, has been arranged and is now contributed by Charles J. Cohen and presented by him to his fellow-members to commemorate the approaching fiftieth anniversary of the organization.

In preparing the biographic sketches and obtaining the portraits it was essential to consult contemporary records; for this the Free Library of Philadelphia offered its unrivalled facilities from which to gather the data, followed by a generous response from authors and publishers.

In many instances descendants and friends of those represented have shown every courtesy in lending their treasures so that copies might be made, and for all these privileges a grateful appreciation is here noted.

FOREWORD

Nearly fifty years have elapsed since the organization of the Penn Club. But one of the original members is living today. It seems appropriate that a record should be made of the activities of the Club and of the careers of its officers.

The Club came into existence after the Civil War and prior to the Centennial Exhibition. The organizers were among those whose characters had been formed during the period of the war and that of the reconstruction that followed, and the present members of the Club who have done their duty in no less trying times may well cherish the memory of their predecessors.

The intention of the Club is expressed in the Charter as follows:

The purposes for which the Corporation is formed are the association of authors, artists, men of science and the learned professions, and amateurs of music, letters and the fine arts; and by receptions given to men or women distinguished in art, literature, science or politics, and other kindred means, to promote social intercourse among its members.

The gatherings of the Club, with its other activities, show that the purposes have been well carried out. It has become recognized as a body of men devoted to the traditions of our City and State, and to courageous and independent thought.

Its history of nearly fifty years involves the companionship of a group whose true American and public spirit justifies us, who have succeeded them, in a feeling of pride.

The founders were men of force of character and independent thought. Frequent meetings of such a body served as an opportunity to focus and reinforce advanced yet conservative opinions on the topics of the day.

The receptions, the notable work of the Club, have not merely been pleasant gatherings, but have given to our members and their friends the privilege of meeting distinguished men and women under conditions free from prejudice. Opposing views have never marred the cordiality of these events or prevented the recognition of the virtues of our friends.

The younger men have enjoyed the encouragement and inspiration of contact with those whose names are connected with the achievement of the day. Those who are older have had the pleasure of entertaining as men of eminence those whom they knew as boys.

We trust that this review of The Penn Club, as it may be supplemented by the recollection of those who may read it, will amply justify its existence and lead to renewed activity.

And we will keep
True faith with you who lie asleep.

THE PENN CLUB
The Reception Rooms

ORIGIN OF THE PENN CLUB

(Reprinted from the edition of 1913)

The following has been taken in part from notes contributed by Mr. Wharton Barker, in 1911, at the request of the Secretary of the Club:

Wharton Barker, well known to all Philadelphians, in 1869 received from the University of Pennsylvania the degree of Master of Arts (A.M.), and immediately conceived the idea of publishing a journal at Philadelphia that would demonstrate the existence in our community of a number of men of good standing in education and culture, possessed of large and accurate scientific knowledge, of the proper appreciation of the fine arts, and above all of groups of men who had by years of constant study acquired a thorough knowledge of economic and social questions; and, as an outcome, it was considered that this was a suitable place in which to publish a monthly magazine that would lead in high standards of pure morals, letters, science, art and politics.

Those who organized the Penn Monthly Association were Robert Ellis Thompson [now Principal Emeritus of the Philadelphia High School], Henry Reed, J. M. Power Wallace, Otis H. Kendall and Wharton Barker.

The Penn Monthly began its publication in 1870 and continued until the close of 1880, when the weekly journal entitled The American took its place.

The publication was at once approved by the leading men of the day—Henry C. Carey, Dr. William H. Furness, J. Peter Lesley, Edward D. Cope, Charles P. Krauth, Oswald Seidensticker and others of equal fame. Within the year, Henry Armitt Brown, George Biddle, A. Sidney Biddle, Samuel Wagner, Jr., and John C. Sims became associated with the work. Mr. Sims was the Secretary and permanently occupied the publication office. The magazine was at first published from the office of the Legal Intelligencer on Fifth Street below Chestnut; Robert Ellis Thompson was editor-in-chief, whilst all others in the group were subject to his blue pencil.

Subsequently the office of publication was removed to 506 Walnut Street, on the third floor, and the rooms occupied soon became known as the abode of science, art, literature and politics, on account of the semi-monthly receptions given by the Penn Monthly Association. The hour of meeting was 9 P. M., that of adjournment midnight and often much later. The number of hosts and guests was limited to thirty-five, and the obligation of being present after acceptance was considered as binding as for a dinner invitation, so that the room was always filled to its capacity. The receptions were of a simple character, but the conversation always important and often commanding. The young and the old played their several parts. Henry C. Carey, General Robert Patterson, the elder Morton McMichael, Judge Sharswood and others of their class were usually in attendance. Among the young men were Morton McMichael, Jr., Howard Roberts, the sculptor; W. W. Nevin, editor; William J. Clark, editor (brother of Charles Heber Clark); George Allen (both the last named of the Evening Telegraph), Simon A. Stern (afterward Secretary of The Penn Club for a number of years), L. Clarke Davis and John Foster Kirk, the last named the historian of Charles the Bold of Burgundy. These were all men of ability and were constant in attendance at receptions of the Penn Monthly Association, which had now become an institution of Philadelphia.

In 1875, having in view the approaching Centennial Exhibition of 1876, The Penn Club was organized. Morton McMichael, Jr., made the lease of 720 Locust Street with the late Horace Howard Furness. James P. Sims arranged the scheme of decoration and designed the mantel upon which McMichael and Barker placed the statue of Penn, modeled in plaster by Müller; Henry Armitt Brown hung the picture said to represent William Penn. The membership was limited to two hundred, and in a few weeks the list was complete; for the first time in Philadelphia, men of letters, scientists of all kinds, artists, musicians, editors, lawyers, merchants who were classed as men of culture united to receive the guests of the Centennial Exhibition and to show our own citizens, especially those from places outside of Pennsylvania, that, in addition to the material side, Philadelphia could claim a prominent position in education and culture; this soon came to be recognized by statesmen, scientists and men of letters beyond the limits of Philadelphia, and they were honored by an invitation to attend a reception tendered to them by The Penn Club.

The first reception was given on the evening of March 25, 1875, the date on which the Club was organized, and was held at 506 Walnut Street; it was to the Hon. Carl Schurz, who had delivered an address at Musical Fund Hall earlier in the evening. The bill of fare for the supper was sherry, Madeira, whiskey, with three hundred fried oysters and a cold turkey. Alexander Coots, from the Sheriff's office, was engaged as waiter.

The Club took possession of its quarters at 720 Locust Street in May, 1875, the first reception being given to Mr. Dion Boucicault, actor, on the twenty-seventh of that month. It was at this gathering that the late Hon. Daniel Dougherty, frequently styled the "Silver-tongued Orator," visited the various rooms in the building, explaining that he had formerly been its tenant and that several members of his family had been born therein. He pointed to a pane of glass on which one of his children had etched "Dougherty" so as to immortalize the family name. Subsequent to Mr. Dougherty's tenancy the building had been occupied by Mr. John Dolman, the theatrical artist attached to the stock company of the Arch Street Theatre at the time of its occupancy by Mrs. John Drew.

Mr. Dolman had a varied career: a soldier during the war with Mexico; on the stage both in New York and Baltimore; then in Philadelphia, as noted above, until his retirement in 1860, when he appeared in a farewell benefit as Master Walter to the Julia of Mrs. Bowers. After the study of law he became a member of the Philadelphia Bar and a successful practitioner.

Adam Everly, at one time a member of Mrs. Drew's company and highly esteemed by Philadelphians, frequently attended the gatherings of the Club and by his admirable declamations gave great delight to those present.

From time to time the Club has been the recipient of gifts from members.

In 1910 a glass decanter of an old and rare design was presented by Mr. William S. Lloyd.

The center-table, through the activity of one of the early members, was secured at Thomas & Sons' auction house, then on Fourth Street near Walnut, at a fraction of the price that has frequently been offered for it by visitors impressed by its style.

The fire tongs and shovel were a gift from Dr. Furness in 1877, at that time and for ten years President of the Club. . . .

The general receptions given by the Club vary in number from year to year, following the visits of men and women of distinction; there is also the selection of those of our own citizenship who have acquired fame in their various walks of life. . . . They are free from formality; the members and their friends are presented to the guest or guests of the occasion, and subsequently are free to mingle in conversation without restriction, and every effort is made to engender cordiality and friendliness between those assembled.

The refreshment served on these occasions is of a simple character, but since it has not been adversely criticised it is felt that it is fully up to modern requirement.

EXTRACTS FROM THE MINUTES

Some of the incidents associated with the Club's activities have been taken from the minute books:

On the 29th of March, 1875, the late Dr. William Pepper, on behalf of the late Henry C. Gibson, made inquiry as to whether the proposed Social Art Club could not be merged in The Penn Club; a long discussion followed but no definite action was taken looking toward the solution of the problem. It is known, however, that the Social Art Club developed into a social club of rank, now known as the Rittenhouse Club, and The Penn Club has continued following out a career of honoring, so far as lies in its power, those men and women who have contributed to the welfare of this or other communities.

In October, 1875, the suggestion was offered that members should be requested to read papers on literary, scientific or art subjects, the reading to cover about twenty minutes. The suggestion was adopted, and there is a record of a number of papers. They were discontinued, however, owing, no doubt, to the fact that other organizations had fully developed this particular literary feature.

In March, 1875, "the propriety of entertaining Messrs. Wendell Phillips, John G. Whittier and George William Curtis, who will be in Philadelphia during April next," was decided. There is no evidence that the reception was tendered, and those of the present generation who remember the political controversy of the period can well realize the situation as it appeared.

In February, 1876, the following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That the steward of the Club be directed to light one each of the burners in the reading room, library, and dining room, daily at dusk, and to keep the same burning at a low point until 10 P. M. Also that the fire in the library should be lighted at 4 o'clock each afternoon and kept burning until 10 P. M., and that the fire in the dining room be laid daily before 4 o'clock ready for lighting."

In June, 1876, announcement was made that the Penn Monthly Magazine would hereafter be published by Joseph H. Coates, and that the office in The Penn Club building would no longer be required, and it was at this time that the services of Mr. Hayllar were assumed by the Club, since apparently his interests had been mostly with the publication of the magazine. It may be said that there are few instances on record where a greater devotion to the success of a club organization has been shown than in the excellent manner in which Mr. Hayllar rendered his manifold duties through a period covering more than thirty years. Mr. Hayllar retired from active management and his son successfully assumed the duties. The father retained the high esteem of the members, who appreciated his exceptionally long and excellent service.

In January, 1877, authority was given for the introduction of gas into the building.

In March, 1877, James L. Claghorn suggested the purchase by the Club of certain picture frames, promising at the time to lend engravings from his noted collection.

In October, 1877, permission was given to two cooking clubs, composed of young women and named respectively "XX" and "Baker's Dozen," to use the kitchen and adjoining room on Tuesday and Thursday of each week during the season of 1877-78, each club to furnish its own fuel, cooking utensils, linen and china. The Secretary was directed to request the ladies of the Baker's Dozen Club to select suitable material for curtains for the windows.

On the 15th of November, 1877, the Club issued a circular, signed by Horace Howard Furness, calling the attention of members to the privileges of the Club, which included a wood fire in the reading room and the furnishing of the leading magazines of the day, with refreshments when required. It was found, however, that clubs in the western part of the city covered that field successfully, and this feature was finally abandoned.

In 1878 the Club purchased twenty dozen plates of French china, with three wine coolers, at the United States Government sale of property late of the "Trois Frères" restaurant, a memory of the Centennial Exhibition.

In May the following was issued to members, it being the year of the great exhibition in Paris:

"The Secretary of the Franco-American (Washington) Club, Paris, forwards the information that any member of The Penn Club visiting Paris during the present year (1878) may on presentation of his card at the FRANCO-AMERICAN (WASHINGTON) Club, 4 Place de l'Opéra, be admitted as a guest during the period of ten days. Should his stay be prolonged, he can procure monthly or three-monthly tickets without the formality of being balloted for.

"(Signed) JOHN C. SIMS, JR.,
"Secretary."

On the 16th of March, 1889, the charter of the Club was approved by the Court of Common Pleas, No. 1, it having been obtained by B. Frank Clapp, Esq., and John A. Clark, Esq., acting as solicitors of the Club. The Club had issued a statement covering its objects and rules, signed as follows: Wharton Barker, Chairman; Morton McMichael, Jr., Treasurer; Jno. C. Sims, Jr., Secretary; W. W. Nevin, Sam'l Wagner, Jr., Howard Roberts, composing the management.

At the meeting in January, 1895, report was made that "the Club has been the recipient of a very valuable and interesting group of engravings, the work of his own hands, from Mr. John Sartain. These fine examples of the donor's art added greatly to the attractiveness of the Club rooms, which during the year were entirely redecorated."

At various times the gatherings of The Penn Club have been noted for exceptional happenings. At the reception to the Historical Societies of Pennsylvania and New York on October 27, 1877, Hon. Wayne MacVeagh delivered a stirring address in commemoration of the 195th anniversary of the landing of William Penn. On December 17, 1886, the late Dr. Furness, on his own behalf and representing other contributors, presented to "The Acharnians" a silver vase filled with gold pieces in appreciation of an admirable performance of the Greek play. It was at the reception given to the late Provost William Pepper on February 22, 1881, that Joseph Wharton presented to Dr. Pepper a bond for twenty-five thousand dollars to endow the Wharton School of Finance, a department of the University of Pennsylvania that has attracted the attention of the entire country and has developed men of ability and quality in various walks of life and in many communities.

A distinguished member of the Club whose memory should be cherished was Lieutenant Henry H. Gorringe, a member from 1883 to the time of his death, July 6, 1885. He it was who brought the obelisk from the shores of Alexandria to New York City, and under the authority of the late William H. Vanderbilt placed this priceless monument in Central Park.

In 1915 the indirect electric lighting apparatus was installed in the middle or music room, a generous gift from the Hon. William H. Staake. The innovation was pronounced an admirable one, the Club realizing its usefulness, its beauty and the advantages to be derived from it.

Mr. William C. Irvin presented an engraving representing President Abraham Lincoln, his wife and two sons, a proof copy by William Sartain, the skilful son of the eminent artist and engraver, the late John Sartain, a number of whose engravings, gifts from him, had adorned our walls.

At the special meeting of the Club held May 27, 1916, the By-Laws were amended so as to provide for an increase to nine in the membership of the Board of Directors and the creating of the office of Vice-President. The By-Laws were further amended February 16, 1921, as marked on page 37. A collection of historical documents was received from Sir Gilbert Parker, Bart., the eminent historian.

THE PENN CLUB IN THE WORLD WAR, 1917-18

At the annual meeting of the Club held January 10, 1918, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That Members who are or shall be engaged in the Military or Naval Service of the United States be and are exempted from the payment of dues during the period of their service in the present war, from and after January 1, 1918.

It was also ordered that there be printed a Roll of Honor comprising the names of the members of the Club who are in the service of the United States.

HONOR ROLL

MAJOR CHARLES J. BIDDLE
CAPTAIN GEORGE WENTWORTH CARR
MAJOR JOHN LEWIS EVANS
CAPTAIN C. FONTAINE-MAURY LEIDY, M.D.
MAJOR GEORGE WILLIAM MILLER, M.D.
LIEUTENANT A. CHARLES MYERS
COLONEL S. P. WETHERILL, JR.
COLONEL BENJAMIN H. WHITTAKER

The service flag obtained was suitably enclosed in a permanent manner with a record of the names on our Honor Roll, to which the Club will always point with pride and satisfaction at the distinguished service rendered to our Country in its hour of need.

Subsequent to the Armistice in November, 1918, it had been the desire of the Club to extend a reception to its members on the Honor Roll; arrangements had been made for the date of March 8, 1919, but had to be postponed since it was found that none was able to be present.

The reception, however, was held on the evening of Saturday, November 15, 1919, at which there was a large and enthusiastic gathering to welcome the returned heroes of the World War.

The Preamble and Resolutions written and offered by Hon. Wm. H. Staake, adopted at the annual meeting, January 10, 1918, were prepared and signed by President Tower and the Secretary; bearing the Seal of the Club they were duly forwarded to Washington with the following letter:

Philadelphia, January 22, 1918.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Sir:

At the annual meeting of The Penn Club held on the tenth instant resolutions were adopted with instructions that they be forwarded to the President of the United States and herewith I have the honor of enclosing them.

Respectfully,

CHARLES J. COHEN, Secretary.

Acknowledgment was received as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington, January 26, 1918.

My dear Mr. Cohen:

The President has received your letter of January 22d, with enclosure, and he asks me to thank you and all concerned very warmly for this assurance of confidence and support. He is greatly heartened by your generous expressions.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) JOSEPH P. TUMULTY,
Secretary to the President.

Mr. Charles J. Cohen, Secretary,
THE PENN CLUB,
Philadelphia, Pa.

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS

WHEREAS, The Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled have on the sixth day of April, A. D. 1917, declared that the people of the United States are in a state of war with the people of The Empire of Germany, and on the seventh day of December, A. D. 1917, with the Empire of Austria-Hungary;

AND WHEREAS, The President of the United States of America, as the Commander-in-Chief of its Army and Navy, has called upon all of its citizens to unite in the support and defense of the just and righteous principles of the Constitutional Government of the United States, against the autocratic, domineering, unlawful, and indefensible violations of their personal and property rights, as citizens of this great Republic;

AND WHEREAS, The officers and members of The Penn Club, since its organization in the year 1875, whether citizens by birth or by adoption, have always recognized it was and now is their duty to stand firm in defense of their inalienable rights under the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America and the Constitution and Laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania;

AND WHEREAS, Those rights have been and now are endangered and assaulted by the Empires of Germany, Austria-Hungary, their allies and vassals:

Therefore, be it Resolved, That the officers and members of The Penn Club do individually and collectively hold and declare that "complete victory for American Arms is necessary to preserve our system of legal freedom established and developed through centuries of thought, effort, and sacrifice."

And do further Resolve, That the officers and members of The Penn Club do pledge their loyal support to the President, and the Legislative and Judicial Departments of the United States of America, in the performance of the obligations with which they are officially charged as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, the makers and interpreters of the Laws of the Nation.

(Signed) CHARLEMAGNE TOWER,
President.

Attest:

CHARLES J. COHEN,
Secretary.

An active discussion among the members having arisen as to the advisability of holding receptions during the period of the World War, the Club was called in special meeting, and after discussion the following was unanimously adopted June 6, 1918:

WHEREAS, It has been the custom and usage of the Club not to hold receptions between the months of June and October. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the members present that no receptions be held until the autumn unless some unusual opportunity should arise to honor distinguished persons, in which event the Board is requested to arrange promptly for such receptions.

Further, as to a continuance of the receptions during the period of the war the members of the Club desire that the decision as to action in such cases be left to the discretion of the Board of Directors.

In accordance with the resolution adopted by the Club at its Annual Meeting, held January 9, 1919, the Board of Directors decided to inaugurate a series of informal meetings and dinners which were held on the evenings of Wednesday, February 12th, at which E. Clinton Rhoads, Esq., presided, the topic discussed being "The Relation of the Citizen to His Community," with special reference to Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday it was and whose character was set forth as an example to the rising generation; Wednesday, March 12th, at which Dr. Albert E. Roussel presided, the topic discussed being "Prohibition, Its Probable Effect Upon the Community and Its Desirability from Medical and Economic Standards"; Wednesday, April 30th, at which John B. Clement, Esq., presided, the topic discussed being "The League of Nations," Hon. George W. Norris, our fellow-member, upon invitation having come from Washington to address the Club, presenting the subject in a masterly manner.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of The Penn Club held at the Club House the twenty-third day of January, A. D. 1919—on motion of William H. Staake—the following "Minute" concerning the death of Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt drafted by our fellow-member, the Honorable J. Willis Martin, was unanimously adopted and a copy thereof directed to be sent to Mrs. Roosevelt:

MINUTE

When the most intensely human of all the great men of the world passed out of existence, a great national bulwark was removed.

Never has the little mound in a churchyard, which signifies human sorrow, typified a grief so personal to so many persons.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

was a man of diversified talents, and possessed a vivid interest in all things, and in all conditions of people. His broad democracy had a quality which inspired the masses and made the individuals his personal friends. No man ever held the love of so vast a number of people. There was a spirit in his strong personality which created friends of political enemies when closer intimacy disclosed his clean vigorous life and the unquestionable integrity of his patriotism.

His speeches, although devoid of ostentatious oratory, and his writings unadorned by the flowers of rhetoric, carried conviction and inspired devotion to the cause he championed. He had the right word for the right place and gleams of humor gave dramatic vivacity to his debates. Possessing extraordinary powers of philippic they were never abused, and there was no one more generous in awarding praise where praise was due.

He enjoyed life in the fullest measure and possessed the faculty of making those about him happy.

His great heart and his lofty ideals of practical truths, spurned a neutrality towards nations that disgraced the humanity of the sea and committed atrocious international crimes.

The life he lived for high and honorable ends, his untarnished reputation, great abilities and inexhaustible vitality won the best gifts a great nation could bestow; and in each office he was called to fill, including the Presidency of this great republic, he displayed the talent to execute and the virtue to adorn it.

In his ardent love for the United States of America, with all parts of which he was intimately familiar, there was no divided allegiance. He knew no North, no South, no East or no West but one indivisible country; and in her defense he was ever foremost—"his crest high and his falchion keen, he sought no craven covert but fought in the open list with muscular and mental might which decried the unreasoning cries of the mob, and rolled back the thunders of the executive anathema." Born in the purple, he was a scholar and his reading classical and varied; "But his favorite volume was the book of human nature, which he consulted without regard to the binding."

As a legislator he was practical, and never criticised a wrong for which he failed to provide a remedy.

Although a partisan, he was an American, and strove to make his party conserve his country. His power of comprehensive forecast and enlarged philosophy had a scope which comprehended foreign lands, and was enriched by European travel and historic research.

The soft winds from the Sound chant their requiem over the grave of a statesman of the highest rank, a patriot of matchless purity and lustre whose life was devoted to his country in peace and war, untimely claimed by death on the era of new devotion.

His fame brightens the page of history that nothing can eclipse; he sank below the horizon like the sun full-orbed in the blaze of his splendor.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors held June 2, 1921, upon announcement of the resignation from the Vice-Presidency, as also from active membership, of Sussex D. Davis, Esq., upon motion Mr. Davis was elected an honorary member of the Club with an expression of regret at the cessation of his active membership and with an appreciation of his years of valued service.

September 2, 1921, the manager or steward, Frank Janssens, resigned, having served the Club since November 26, 1917. W. H. Hayllar, who had formerly filled the position and had resigned to accept an appointment abroad, had returned to this country and applied for the position; his management of the Club House having been entirely satisfactory in the past, he was re-engaged. The older members of the Club are glad to recognize these good qualities, since they recall with much satisfaction the sterling character of the elder Hayllar, who fulfilled his manifold duties as manager through a period covering more than thirty years with marked success.

At the close of the year 1920 a special committee of five which was appointed in January, 1920, to consider the general condition of the Club and suggest possible changes in the By-Laws, presented its report under date of December 27, 1920, which the Board took into consideration on the 30th of the same month, deciding to include its recommendations (with slight modifications) in the report to be presented at the annual meeting of the Club to be held January 13, 1921. This was carried out, a number of recommendations tentatively agreed to, and the By-Laws amended. They appear on page 37 in their correct form.

REMINISCENCES

Mr. Francis T. Sully Darley, whose love of music and art endeared him to Philadelphians, took an active interest in the early years of the Club's existence and brought to its membership many men of quality whose attainments were of value. He recently recalled his presence at the reception given to General U. S. Grant, Ex-President of the United States, when there were elaborate floral decorations throughout the rooms, a custom not followed except in the instance of receptions to notable women whose presence added distinction to the reputation of the Club.

General Grant reached the Club House at 9 o'clock, escorted by Mr. George W. Childs, and since few members were of equal punctuality, Mr. Darley, an early arrival, engaged the General in conversation and soon found a topic of mutual interest in the career of General Alfred Sully, a West Pointer, an uncle of Mr. Darley. Seated on the noted couch in the well-known northern corner, memories were exchanged of the experiences of the two generals at West Point and during the Mexican War.

General Sully for years was an active participant in the conflict on the Indian frontier under conditions that are little understood by the present generation but are features in the memory of men over sixty years of age who can recall the heart-burnings and anxieties that prevailed during the period noted.

President Edward R. Wood, one of our oldest members, not in years but in date of membership, contributes this memory:

Forty years ago I was a young and comparatively modest man, not apt to intrude upon more important people (in those days young men as a rule answered to this description), and a picture unfolds of a dense press of distinguished gentlemen, many in uniform, others wearing minor decorations (a custom that now it would be well to follow).

It was a most important occasion for me when I conversed with General U. S. Grant at the reception given him by the Club in 1877; at a date fifteen years earlier I had met him amid the scenes of war under peculiar circumstances, evidently suggesting to him that I might have been a Rebel or a spy. It seemed to me at that time—and now, after all these years, I cannot consider it in any other light—that it was a most serious event; but, strange to say, it had made no impression upon the General, and, in his simple manner, he would not even pretend to recollect it. However, the incident passed, and although a distinguished company was present, it was difficult to elicit more than the most formal replies in the course of conversation.

And now as regards the Club's activities. For a number of years during the eighties little interest was taken in its affairs, either as regards its government or its social gatherings.

At one time the attendance fell off to such a point that it seemed to indicate an early dissolution, and, being then actively interested in forming the Art Club, the proposal was made to unite the two memberships with a hyphenated name.

A meeting was called to consider the proposal. A mid-winter night—it was exceedingly cold—but the largest business meeting that had ever assembled in the rooms gathered in front of the attractive wood fire. When the time came to support the proposed merger, with melancholy brow and hands outstretched toward the glowing embers I quoted the trite triptych:

“Old wood to burn,
Old books to read,
Old friends to treat,”

and at some length and with force of conviction dwelt upon the time to follow when all these good and dear old things should have weltered into the Ewigkeit.

Never was an oratorical effort more successful. President Morton McMichael, Jr., remarked that “it was too pathetic for tears.” As a result, the Club unanimously resolved to sacrifice life and sacred honor, but it would be free. However, the Art Club, shocked by the spontaneity of repulsion, sprang forth at once into a large and heroic existence.

On the occasion of the reception to Lord Northcliffe, better known to the present generation as Alfred Harmsworth, there being but few members present at the punctual hour of nine, his Lordship, accompanied by the Secretary, carefully examined each one of the pictures ornamenting the walls, and expressed greatest interest in the representations of William Penn and in other English scenes; he was likewise impressed by the simplicity of the surroundings and the evident care exercised to preserve this atmosphere, always appreciated by men of culture and refinement.

As will be noted, the affairs of the Club were conducted by what was termed a Committee, but on the acceptance of the Charter and the adoption of the By-Laws, under date of March 20, 1889, the style was changed to Board of Directors. When originally formed the Penn Monthly Association was controlled by a Board of Managers, The Penn Club by a Committee of six, three from the Penn Monthly Association and three from The Penn Club. ✓

DECREE

In the Court of Common Pleas No. 1, of the County of Philadelphia

And now, this sixteenth day of March, A. D. 1889, the within Charter and Certificate of Incorporation having been presented to me, a Law Judge of said County, accompanied by due proof of the publication of the notice of this application, as required by Act of Assembly and the rule of this Court in such case named and provided, I certify that I have perused and examined the same and have found it to be in proper form and within the purposes named in the first class specified in Section Second of the Act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, entitled

"An Act to provide for the Incorporation and Regulation of Certain Corporations," approved April 29, 1874, and the supplements thereto, and the same appearing to be lawful, and not injurious to the community, I do hereby, on motion of B. Frank Clapp and John A. Clark, Esqs., on behalf of the petitioners, order and direct that the said Charter of THE PENN CLUB aforesaid be and the same is hereby approved, and that upon the recording of the same and of this order the subscribers thereto and their associates shall be a corporation by the name of THE PENN CLUB, for the purposes and upon the terms therein stated.

(Signed) CRAIG BIDDLE.

BY-LAWS

As Amended February 16, 1921

1. The Club shall not exceed two hundred and fifty active members.
2. The Annual Meeting of the Club shall be held on the second Thursday after the first day of January of each year, at which time the Board of Directors shall be elected, which Board shall consist of twelve members, including the President, Vice-President, Treasurer and Secretary of the Club, all of whom shall be elected by the Board from their number. Upon the election of the said twelve Directors, they shall be divided by lot into three classes, one class to serve three years, one for two years, and one for one year. Thereafter at each annual meeting of the Club four members of the Board of Directors shall be elected for the term of three years.
3. The President may at any time call a Special Meeting of the Club, and shall do so when requested in writing by ten or more members. Notice of such meeting shall be sent to each member at least one week previously, and the object shall be specified therein. At Special Meetings no business shall be transacted other than that specified in the notice.
4. Ten members shall constitute a quorum at any Annual or Special Meeting.
5. The Board of Directors shall hold meetings at least once a month for the purpose of receiving and considering the names of all persons proposed for membership, such names, with the name of the member proposing and of the member seconding them, having been sent to each member at least one week before they are voted upon by the Directors; shall elect by unanimous vote new members of the Club; shall have general charge of the property and of the Club rooms, and of all entertainments given in them; shall issue invitations for entertainments to persons not members of the Club, whose names may be suggested by members; shall make such rules as are necessary for the management of the Club, and shall render a report in writing at the Annual Meeting.
6. Persons not living in this city may be elected by the Directors to non-resident membership of the Club, for one or more years, upon payment of ten dollars per annum. Such non-resident members shall be entitled to the use of the Club rooms and to all other privileges of membership except the right to vote and the rights to property.
7. There shall be an initiation fee of fifteen dollars. The annual dues shall be twenty-five dollars, payable in January of each year; and members whose dues remain unpaid on the first day of May, having been duly notified thirty days previously, may be dropped from the rolls.
For the years 1922 and 1923 the initiation fee of fifteen dollars shall not be collected from new members admitted during those years.
A Junior membership shall be created with all privileges except the right to vote and hold office, to consist of men between twenty-one and thirty years of age, proposed and elected in the usual way. Dues in this class to be ten dollars per annum without initiation fee; such Junior members when reaching thirty years of age to become full members and to pay full annual dues without initiation fee.

Honorary membership may be conferred upon any person at the discretion of the Board of Directors.

✓ 8. The common seal of the Corporation shall be the Penn Coat-of-Arms with the motto "Dum clavum teneam," and at the top of which shall be the words "The Penn Club."

9. These By-Laws shall be amended only by a two-thirds vote of the members of the Club present at a meeting of the Club; Provided, That a copy of such proposed amendment or amendments shall be mailed to each member of the Club at least ten days before such meeting.

WHARTON BARKER

FOUNDER, CHARTER MEMBER AND PRESIDENT, 1875-77

WHARTON BARKER was born in Philadelphia, May, 1846. His father, Abraham Barker, head of the banking house of Barker Brothers and Company, was a prominent Abolitionist. He was president of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange and was one of the original fifty members who founded the Union Club, later The Union League.

The grandfather, Jacob Barker, was a ship owner and financier friend of Andrew Jackson, James Madison, Alexander Hamilton, DeWitt Clinton, and many other public men of that period. The Barkers took the entire Government War Loan of ten million dollars issued in 1812.

Wharton Barker received his early education at Charles Short's school, later entering the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1869, and for 41 years was a member of the Board of Trustees of his Alma Mater. He was a noted economist and banker and at one time an international financier. In the years 1878-79 he acted as confidential agent for Czar Alexander II, for whom he contracted to build four war vessels. Later, visiting Russia, he had several confidential interviews with the Czar regarding the development of that country as to its coal mines.

Active in liberal movements and public affairs, he became a frequent contributor to public journals and took a direct interest in the Presidential campaign of 1880. When in Washington in the room of the Committee of Ways and Means, he told James A. Garfield that he intended to make him "the next President of the United States."

Returning to Philadelphia, he organized the Anti-Third-Term League, which spread over the country, and at Chicago during the convention he persevered successfully for the nomination of Garfield.

Up to the year 1896 he belonged to the militant wing of the Republican Party, but becoming an advocate of free silver, he entered the Populist Party, being its candidate for the Presidency in the year 1900.

In his active days as a banker he founded the Investment Company of Philadelphia, which later became a Trust Company, and the Finance Company of Pennsylvania, of which George H. Earle is now president.

He was the first president of The Penn Club, serving from 1875 to 1877.

Wharton Barker died in Philadelphia in 1921.

SAMUEL WAGNER, JR.
1842 -

SAMUEL WAGNER, JR.

FOUNDER

SAMUEL WAGNER, JR., was born in Philadelphia in 1842, a son of Samuel and Emilie Obrié (Duval) Wagner, and is descended from Tobias Wagner, a distinguished German theologian, chancellor of the University of Tübingen in Würtemberg. His early youth was spent in the Episcopal Academy, and he later entered the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1861 as Bachelor of Arts. For some time he was an instructor in mathematics at the Episcopal Academy, but in 1862-63, during the emergencies arising from the invasion of the State, he enlisted in the National Guard and saw active service. Subsequently he became a law student in the University of Pennsylvania, being admitted to practice in the Philadelphia Courts in 1866, followed by his admission to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. Wagner's public-spirited interest in his native community is evidenced by activities in various organizations, and in some instances his association with the founding of important ones. Of these latter may be mentioned the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Art; the Free Library of Philadelphia; American Society for Extension of University Teaching; Pennsylvania Civil Service Reform Association; Medical Jurisprudence Society. He was also one of the founders of the Penn, Rittenhouse, University and Philobiblon Clubs, president of the Wagner Free Institute of Science 1884-1921, and now president emeritus. A member of the American Philosophical Society for nearly forty years, he served as a councillor. For some time he was chief of the editorial staff of the Penn Monthly, and has contributed many learned papers to the journals and magazines of the day.

MORTON McMICHAEL, JR.
1836 - 1904

MORTON McMICHAEL, JR.

FOUNDER, CHARTER-MEMBER AND PRESIDENT OF THE PENN CLUB, 1888-1904

MORTON McMICHAEL, JR., was born in Philadelphia, February 5, 1836. His father was Morton McMichael, Mayor of Philadelphia; owner and editor of the North American and United States Gazette, a journal with a wide and important influence; the first president of the Park Commission, which he ably served for more than a decade.

Morton McMichael, Jr., was educated at the Episcopal Academy. At the outbreak of the Civil War he received the appointment as colonel on the staff of Governor Curtin (the famous War Governor of Pennsylvania), and later on the staff of General Reynolds at the battle of Antietam. Returning to Philadelphia on the organization of the First National Bank, the first institution to be created under the Federal Banking Act, and which holds the title of No. 1, he became its cashier, later vice-president and president.

He married Ellen Thomas, the daughter of Moses Thomas, the founder of the noted firm of auctioneers, M. Thomas & Sons, long an important commercial factor in the business life of the city. Moses Thomas served with the First City Troop in the War of 1812 and was one of the first members of the Philadelphia Club.

Mr. McMichael inherited from his distinguished father a love of literature and was possessed of a fine library in his home on Twenty-second below Walnut Street, where he would indulge in the reading of many favorite authors.

Interested in the progress of his native city, he took part in many of its activities, being a member of the Colonial Society of Pennsylvania, a vestryman of St. Mark's Episcopal Church and a leader in the affairs of the parish, a former president of the American Bankers Association, a director in Wm. Cramp and Sons Shipbuilding Company, and a member of the Philadelphia Club, Society of Colonial Wars, the Rabbit, the Country and the Contemporary Clubs, The Union League of Philadelphia and the Metropolitan Club of Washington.

McMichael was intimate with Burton, the famous English actor, was a personal friend of Edwin Booth and reputed as closer to Henry Irving than any other American. At one time he represented the State of Pennsylvania in her war claims against the United States Government and took special pride in the fact that he had become the oldest national bank officer in continued and uninterrupted service in the United States—forty-one years.

His brothers were Clayton and Walter McMichael, who succeeded to the ownership of the North American, so long a potent factor in National Republican affairs, and Col. William McMichael, who, in the War of the Rebellion, served on the staff of General Halleck, and on that of General Rosecrans, and was taken prisoner at the Battle of Shiloh. After the close of the Civil War, on his return to Philadelphia, he was chosen colonel of the First Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard. He was appointed United States District Attorney for this section and served ably and successfully for a series of years.

Morton McMichael's daughter became the wife of Henry M. Hoyt, former Solicitor-General of the United States. Mrs. Hoyt is now a resident of Washington and has generously bestowed the former family residence on Twenty-second Street, upon that noble institution, The Children's Hospital, which disposed of it to advantage, using the funds realized in the construction of the new buildings at Eighteenth and Bainbridge Streets.

The only surviving brother is Hon. Charles B. McMichael, president of the Court of Common Pleas No. 3, interested in all forward movements in the community, to which he gives his valuable and intelligent aid.

Morton McMichael, Jr., died March 28, 1904.

HON. WILLIAM B. HANNA
1835 - 1906

HON. WILLIAM B. HANNA

CHARTER MEMBER AND PRESIDENT, 1905-06

(From the Historical Catalogue, by courtesy of The St. Andrew's Society)

HON. WILLIAM BRANTLY HANNA, president judge of the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia, was born in Philadelphia, November 23, 1835; and died at Atlantic City, N. J., where he had gone in the hope of restoration to health, August 4, 1906.

He was the oldest son of the late John Hanna, Esq., a well-known member of the Bar of Philadelphia. His mother was a daughter of the Rev. Joseph Stephens, of the Upper Freehold, N. J., Baptist Church, 1789-93.

He received his education at public and private schools in Philadelphia, and was graduated in July, 1853, from the Central High School, and in 1857 from the law department of the University of Pennsylvania. He began the study of the law in the office of his father, and was admitted to the Bar on November 14, 1857. He early took an active part in political and public affairs, and shortly after his admission to the Bar he became one of the assistants of District Attorney William B. Mann. In 1867 he was elected to Common Council, was re-elected in 1870, and before the expiration of his term was chosen a member of Select Council. While a member of Select Council he was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention which framed the present Constitution of the State.

After his re-election to Select Council for the term beginning January, 1874, he was nominated as one of the three judges to compose the Orphans' Court established by the new Constitution. In 1884 he was unanimously renominated by both the Republican and Democratic parties and unanimously elected, and again in 1894 and in 1904.

While a member of the Common Council of the city he was chairman of the Committee on Police and Fire Departments, and prepared the ordinance of 1870 establishing the paid fire department in lieu of the old volunteer system then existing. He was also chairman of the Committee on Law. He was prominently identified with the Masonic order for more than a third of a century, being pastmaster of Washington Lodge No. 59, and member of the Committee on Appeals of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and latterly therein represented the Grand Lodge of Vermont.

Judge Hanna was identified with many of the benevolent and social organizations of Philadelphia. He was president of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, a manager of the Home Baptist Mission Society and the Pennsylvania Working Home for Blind Men, president of the board of trustees of the Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital, vice-president of the West Philadelphia Institute, president of the Society of the Alumni of the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, a trustee of the Baptist Home, president of the Pennsylvania Baptist Education Society and a director for many years and afterward president of The Penn Club, which has entertained more distinguished men and women than any similar organization in the city. Judge Hanna was for many years a member of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, but at the time of his death was a member of the Epiphany Baptist Church, Thirty-sixth and Chestnut Streets, and also for a number of years on its board of trustees. In June, 1885, Bucknell University conferred upon him the degree of D.C.L.

He served as a private soldier in Captain Henry D. Landis' Independent Artillery, Company A, Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, in 1862.

Judge Hanna married, December 16, 1862, Mary Vander-slice Hopper, daughter of Samuel Mickle and Deborah Lavinia Hopper, of Philadelphia. Their children are Miss Helen Allison Hanna, Mrs. Maud Calder, widow of Colonel Howard L. Calder, and Meredith Hanna, Esq., a member of the Philadelphia Bar and of The St. Andrew's Society.

JOHN C. SIMS
1845 - 1901

JOHN C. SIMS

FOUNDER

JOHN CLARK SIMS was born in Philadelphia in 1845. He received his schooling in Philadelphia, entered the Sophomore Class of the University of Pennsylvania in 1862 and was graduated in 1865, taking the Master's degree in course. Subsequently studying law, he was admitted to the Bar in 1868. He spent two years in travel abroad. On January 1, 1876, he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as assistant secretary and was promoted to secretary in 1881.

He was a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania from 1885 until his death, and for many years was president and director of the Athletic Association and the representative of the Board of Trustees on the University Athletic Committee. He was one of the founders and the first president of the Orpheus Club. He was also a member of the Philadelphia Club, the Society of the Cincinnati in New Jersey, the Colonial Wars, Sons of the Revolution, Phi Kappa Sigma, accounting warden of St. Paul's Church, Chestnut Hill, president of the Chestnut Hill Academy, manager University Hospital, director Girard Trust Company and Guarantee Company of North America.

HENRY ARMITT BROWN
1844 - 1878

HENRY ARMITT BROWN
FOUNDER

HENRY ARMITT BROWN was born in Philadelphia, December 1, 1844. His father was Frederick Brown, a manufacturing chemist and dispenser of drugs, for many years having his place of business at the northeast corner of Fifth and Chestnut Streets.

Frederick Brown was a representative business man of character, integrity and public spirit and was honored and respected by his fellow-citizens.

As a lad, Harry, or Hal as his intimates would call him, exhibited an unusual interest in studying histories of great battles and during the period of the Crimean War in Russia, 1855-56, the garden of his home was arranged to represent a battlefield with platoons of diminutive soldiers marching across the fields, forts blowing up, dwellings in flames, rivers crossed, and discharges of artillery from the flying batteries. On one occasion, his younger brother relates, they had a representation of the great fortress, the Malakoff, and after many attacks from the little brass cannon, the onslaught was repulsed, Harry remarking, "Well, Lardner, we have reversed history; the Malakoff cannot be taken this afternoon. Let us get some dinner."

He was anxious to enter the West Point Academy, but his father, doubtless recognizing the delicacy of his constitution, decided adversely.

His first instructor other than at home was Miss Lerner, who taught school in the basement of St. Luke's Church; he later studied at the Burlington Academy and at the boarding-school of Dr. Lyons in Haverford. In 1861 he entered Yale College, where the surroundings were most congenial and where he soon attained eminence both as a scholar and as a man of exceptional personal quality. He was fond of the classics, of history, political economy and philosophy and was recognized as a ready speaker in his senior year, lithe, graceful, never at a loss for something witty, brilliant, and telling. His career at Yale was marked by great advance in intellectual attainments, as also in a well-deserved popularity, since he was always in the forefront of movements looking toward the enjoyment of leisure hours, frequently contributing by pen and word to song, comedy or farce that enlivened the sophomore and senior years.

After graduation, he joined the Columbia Law School in New York City, reading law for a year, and in 1866 he went abroad, remaining more than a year, visiting every point of interest on the Continent, devoting the winter to Egypt and Palestine, returning by way of Greece and Italy.

After resuming the study of law in the office of Daniel Dougherty, Esq., he was admitted to the Bar in 1869. In 1871 the Yale Alumni Club of Philadelphia was organized, with Mr. Brown as executive secretary, writing and speaking not only in its behalf but for the furtherance of similar associations which were founded throughout the country. About this time he became a member of the Shakespeare Society, with which the late Horace Howard Furness was identified, and greatly benefited by the thorough philologic drill of the critical evenings in contact with the immortal bard.

In 1872, on the occasion of a banquet tendered to the Hon. ex-Chief Justice Thompson, there was a notable assemblage present of members of the Bar and of the judges of the several courts. It was one of the most marked and impressive events which had taken place in the city. Peter McCall, Esq., who presided, responded to the first regular toast, being followed by Chief Justice Read, Hon. George W. Woodward, Hon. Morton McMichael and other distinguished men of the period. The eighth and last regular toast was: "The Juniors of the Bar," and when Henry Armitt Brown rose to reply, astonishment was felt that he should have been assigned to this responsible position, since he was comparatively unknown; but such feelings were dispelled the instant the clear and calm tones of his exquisitely finished elocution fell upon the ear, since the modesty, the manliness, the wit, the good sense, made an impression that was carried far beyond the hall in which the address was given. His reputation was established, an observer remarking, "A more perfect and complete success was never achieved by any orator, and it was the best men of the Bar who were the loudest in his praise."

In 1871 Mr. Brown was married to Miss Josephine Lea, daughter of John R. Baker, Esq., of Philadelphia, a union of happiness and congeniality.

As the International Centennial Exhibition of 1876 approached, he took an active part in addressing public audiences throughout New England and many other sections of the country, evoking patriotic enthusiasm and stimulating an interest productive of excellent results. The most notable oration of the many that he was called upon to deliver was that given on the occasion of the one hundredth anniversary of the meeting of the Congress of 1774 in Carpenters' Hall. The Carpenters' Company, with many prominent citizens, assembled in the historic hall on Chestnut Street above Third, and listened with rapt attention to the address, which was a historical survey of political conditions that had existed for some years, culminating in the Declaration of Independence and the War of the American Revolution.

Other famous orations were: "The Settlement of Burlington," delivered in that city December 6, 1877, in commemoration of the two hundredth anniversary of its settlement; at Valley Forge, June 19, 1878, the one hundredth anniversary of the departure of the Army of the Revolution from winter quarters at that place; and in addition to these many brief addresses full of wit and brilliant with historical knowledge given in his own city and elsewhere.

The country suffered a great loss in the demise of this worthy and talented citizen.

Henry Armitt Brown died August 21, 1878, at Philadelphia, in the thirty-fourth year of his age.

HORACE HOWARD FURNESS, LL.D.
1833 - 1912

HORACE HOWARD FURNESS, LL.D.

CHARTER MEMBER, FOUNDER, AND PRESIDENT, 1877-87

DR. HORACE HOWARD FURNESS was born in Philadelphia, November 2, 1833, the son of Rev. William H. Furness, renowned as a leader of the Unitarian movement and for many years minister of the Unitarian congregation, worshipping at Tenth and Locust Streets.

Dr. Horace Howard Furness lived at the southwest corner of Seventh and Locust Streets, opposite Washington Square and within the shadow of the home of The Penn

Club, of which he was one of the charter members and its president during the years 1877 to 1887.

The fame of Dr. Horace Howard Furness as a Shakespearean scholar and editor extended all over the civilized world. He was the last of a race of gentle scholars, men who make their library their workshop and willingly spend their lives there.

After receiving his preparatory training in Philadelphia, he entered Harvard University, whence he was graduated in 1854. Four years later he received his A.M. degree from the same University and returned to Philadelphia to study law. After being admitted to the Bar he found his physical defect, deafness, made it impossible for him to practice successfully.

When the Civil War began he desired to enlist, but again his defect prevented him from a life of action. It is principally as a Shakespearean editor that he will be remembered everywhere. A few years ago he told in the course of a conversation just how he had been led to take up the serious study of the greatest English poet's work.

I was a boy in my teens when I first heard Mrs. Kemble read, but from that moment I belonged to Shakespeare. She could have won anyone to the love and study of his perfect verse. Later I joined a Shakespeare Society formed here under her inspiration. We realized we had no adequate text to work with, and in my enthusiasm and temerity I decided to attempt to prepare one myself. I soon found I had to go back to the very beginnings, so much that was valuable had been neglected.

The first volume of the Variorum Edition appeared in 1871; this was the tragedy of "Romeo and Juliet," and immediately the renaissance of Shakespearean interest followed with the discovery that the United States had produced a scholar more than the equal of any that had been extolled in Europe. Other volumes followed, and in recognition of his work the University of Halle conferred upon him the degree of Ph.D. in 1878; the University of Pennsylvania conferred the LL.D., and he received degrees from Harvard, Yale, Columbia, from the great English seat of learning, Cambridge, Dr. Furness being one of the few Americans thus honored, and from the University of Göttingen.

Dr. Furness married in 1860 Miss Helen Kate Rogers. His sister was Mrs. A. L. Wister, who occasionally accompanied her distinguished brother in the readings of the plays of Shakespeare, which at times he had been induced to give for charities.

All the leading actors paid tribute to this truly great scholar; Edwin Booth, Sir Henry Irving, Sir Sidney Lee and a host of others were his guests at his country estate at Wallingford. He had what is regarded as the finest Shakespearean library in this country, if not in the world.

His son, Horace Howard Furness, Jr., for ten years prior to his father's death in 1912 had been joint editor of the Variorum Edition and has continued this scholarly work with marked success.

Dr. Furness died at his country estate, Wallingford, Pa., August 13, 1912.

At the memorial service, Hon. J. J. Jusserand, Ambassador of France to the United States, speaking of Dr. Furness as a fellow-member of the American Philosophical Society, quoting from "Marcus Aurelius," showed the entire applicability of the sentiments to the character of Dr. Furness.

Remember his constancy in the fulfilling of the dictates of reason, the evenness of his humor at all junctures, the serenity of his face, his extreme gentleness, his scorn for vainglory, his application to penetrate the meaning of things.

He never discussed any point without having first well examined and well understood it. He bore unjust reproaches without acrimony. He did nothing with undue haste. . . . A foe to slander, he was neither hypercritical, nor suspicious, nor sophistical.

He was pleased with little, modest in his house, his clothing, his food. He loved work, ate soberly, and thus was able to busy himself, for the whole day, with the same problems. Let us remember how constant and equable was his friendship, with what open mind he accepted a frank contradiction of his own views, with what joy he received advice that proved better than his own, and the kind of piety, free from all superstition, that was his. Do as he did, and your last hour will be comforted, as his was, by the conscience of the good accomplished.

The members of The Penn Club on January 13, 1910, adopted the following:

Resolved, That the members of the Penn Club, in annual meeting assembled, extend their hearty congratulations to their beloved ex-president and fellow-member, DR. HORACE HOWARD FURNESS, on his completion of fifty years as a member of the Philadelphia Bar on the nineteenth day of November, A. D. 1909. Although not an active member of the legal profession in his later years, he has by his great learning, scholarly attainments, manly virtues, genial presence and exemplary citizenship adorned and continues to adorn the profession of the law, and has merited the loving admiration of all classes of his fellow-citizens.

To this the following reply, addressed to the secretary, was received:

I duly received the copy of the resolution passed by The Penn Club in reference to the semi-centennial anniversary of my admission to the Bar.

It is difficult to convey in words which shall not seem too emotional, how deeply I am moved by this unexpected expression of loving remembrance, whereby the tie which has hitherto bound The Penn Club and myself is drawn even closer.

Can I utter a fairer wish in return than that every member may live to enjoy "all that should accompany old age—as honour, love, obedience and troops of friends"?

Kindly accept on behalf of the Club this inadequate expression of my gratitude, and believe me

Very cordially yours,

(Signed) HORACE HOWARD FURNESS.

5 February, 1910.

The following Minute was adopted January 9, 1913:

The members of The Penn Club, in annual meeting assembled, express their sincere sorrow for the loss of their eminent, distinguished and venerable fellow-member, DR. HORACE HOWARD FURNESS, by his death at his home at Wallingford, Pa., on the 13th day of August, A. D. 1912.

Dr. Furness became a charter member of the Club March 15, 1875, and served as its second president from the 27th day of January, A. D. 1877, until the 18th day of January, A. D. 1888, remaining upon its Board of Directors until the year 1904.

Dr. Furness studied law in the City of Philadelphia after his graduation at Harvard in the year 1854 and was admitted to the Bar of the County of Philadelphia in the year 1859, at the age of 26 years. Distinguished for his learning in the arts and sciences, he became a member and officer in many leading societies and was the recipient of many honorary degrees from universities in America and abroad, including Halle, Germany, in 1878, and Cambridge, England, in 1899. His greatest achievements were as a Shakesperean author and editor. His Variorum Edition of Shakesperean plays, beginning with "Romeo and Juliet" in 1877 and continued to the date of his death, remains as his greatest monument.

Admired for his attainments of profound scholarship, he was beloved by his fellow-members of The Penn Club for his personal virtues, his forceful personality, his genial presence, generous hospitality, and sympathetic and practical benevolence. Those who have heard him read the plays of Shakespeare, who have been privileged to know the delights of conversation and correspondence with him, will never forget the charm of his personality, the rich humor of his expression and his ready and helpful sympathy. With all his greatness he was retiring and modest in his demeanor, ready to serve and help his fellows, bountiful, kind and loving, meriting and receiving the affectionate admiration of all classes of his fellow-citizens.

WILLIAM WILBERFORCE NEVIN

WILLIAM WILBERFORCE NEVIN

FOUNDER

WILLIAM WILBERFORCE NEVIN was born in Mercersburg, Pa., educated in Lancaster, Pa., and was a member of the Bar of Lancaster County. After serving in the War of the Rebellion, entering as a private and coming out as a captain, he was editor of the Philadelphia Press, under the ownership of Col. John W. Forney, from about 1875 to 1878.

He was a member of The Union League, Philadelphia, and his residence was on the west side of Thirteenth below

Sansom Street, he maintaining bachelor quarters, and living at the League.

About 1878 he left Philadelphia to go to New York City, being interested in the Mexican National Construction Company, and in real estate in and near Pueblo, Colo., and made his permanent home in New York City, where he died. He is buried at Lancaster, Pa.

Two sisters have survived—Miss Nevin, Chestnut Street, Lancaster, Pa., and Miss Blanche Nevin, Windsor Forges, Churchtown, Lancaster County, Pa., and Manasquan, N. J.

Mr. Nevin was one of the sons of the Rev. Dr. John Williamson Nevin, who was president of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, for a number of years. He was a brother of Rev. Dr. Robert Jenkins Nevin, who established the Episcopal church in Rome, known as St. Paul's, and who died a short time after Mr. W. W. Nevin, his brother. Dr. Nevin was buried in Arlington Cemetery, Washington, D. C.

HON. HENRY REED
1846 – 1896

HON. HENRY REED

CHARTER MEMBER

HENRY REED was born in Philadelphia, September 22, 1846. He was the son of Prof. Henry Hope Reed, a distinguished member of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania and a well-known litterateur. The younger Reed prepared for college under his father and at the school of Dr. John W. Faires, situated on Dean Street (now Camac), between Locust and Spruce Streets. Entering the University of Pennsylvania in 1861, he was graduated in 1865 with high honors. He then began the study of law in the office of E. Spencer Miller, Esq., being admitted to the Bar in 1869, and soon achieved a reputation for pronounced literary attainments with an intimate knowledge of law in its varied aspects. In 1883 he published a valuable three-volume work on the Statute of Frauds, which at once took rank and still continues an accepted textbook on the subject. In 1886, from Governor Pattison, he received an appointment to the Bench to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Ludlow in the Court of Common Pleas No. 3. In the same year he became a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania and so continued to serve until his death.

Judge Reed was a rare conversationalist, a charming companion and possessed all the qualities that sweeten life, making social intercourse delightful. Of an affectionate nature, with high culture, thorough scholarship, literary tastes and acquirements, he was an ornament to the Bench to which he was elected on the expiration of the term of his appointment. To relieve the seriousness of legal duties, he undertook the translation into English of George Ebers' The Daughter of an Egyptian King, which had wide popularity at the time of its publication.

Judge Reed had a notable ancestry; his paternal great-grandfather was a revolutionary general and governor of the Commonwealth; his maternal grandfather was Bishop White, the first bishop of the American Episcopal Church.

Judge Reed was a member of the American Philosophical Society, Pennsylvania Society Sons of the Revolution, and of many other public and social organizations. He was twice married; his first wife was Charlotte F. Foster, niece of Mrs. John Edgar Thomson, and his second was Elizabeth Bond.

Judge Reed died February 23, 1896.

JAMES EDWARD CARPENTER
1841 – 1901

JAMES EDWARD CARPENTER

CHARTER MEMBER

JAMES EDWARD CARPENTER was born in 1841, at Chesterfield, Kent County, Md. Carpenter was the great-grandson of Thomas Carpenter of Carpenter's Landing, N. J., who had served as a captain in the Revolutionary Army. His emigrating ancestor was Samuel Carpenter, the first treasurer of Pennsylvania, the intimate friend of William Penn and trustee of his estate.

In the female line he was descended from Thomas Lloyd, Dolobran, Wales, the first Governor of Pennsylvania, under Penn, and from Samuel Preston, who was Mayor of Philadelphia in the year 1711.

He entered the army at the beginning of the Civil War as private in the Eighth Pennsylvania Cavalry, becoming second lieutenant, first lieutenant, captain and brevet major of volunteers. He served on the staff of General David McMurtree Gregg, who commanded the second cavalry division of the cavalry corps. Gregg, when little more than thirty years of age as a brigadier-general in command of ten thousand cavalymen, frustrated Stuart's desperate attempt at Gettysburg to get back of the Union line and destroy the immense wagon train of the Federals. Gregg's staff shared in the glory of this achievement.

Carpenter was seriously wounded at Philomont, Va., on the advance from Antietam.

In the charge of the Eighth Pennsylvania Cavalry against Jackson's corps at the battle of Chancellorsville, his horse was shot under him, and of five officers who rode at the head of the attacking column, he was one of two who survived. He was honorably discharged at the expiration of his term of service and returned to Philadelphia, where he studied law in the office of Theodore Cuyler, Esq., and was admitted to the Bar in 1865.

Of his many activities besides his being a charter member of The Penn Club, and its treasurer from 1888 to 1901, he was treasurer of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania from 1869 to 1898, and a vice-president from 1898 to 1901. As a member of the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry, he served as second lieutenant in that famous body.

He was a vestryman of Christ Church and rector's warden of the Church of the Ascension, and served as a delegate to the Diocesan Convention of the Episcopal Church. He was on the Board of Governors of the Rittenhouse Club; chairman of the Board of Managers and one of the founders of the Pennsylvania Society Sons of the Revolution and also a companion of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

Major Carpenter died at the home of his daughter near Newburyport, Mass., in 1901.

HOWARD ROBERTS
1843 – 1900

HOWARD ROBERTS

FOUNDER.

HOWARD ROBERTS was born in Philadelphia April 9, 1843. His parents were then living at 1033 Spruce Street, now owned and occupied by our distinguished fellow-citizen, Hon. Hampton L. Carson. Mr. Edward Roberts, the senior, later erected the double brownstone mansion at the northeast corner of Eleventh and Spruce Streets where the family lived for many years. This was the residence subsequently acquired by the late Henry LaBarre Jayne, a citizen of remarkable attainments and a man of rare personal accomplishments. Howard Roberts received his early education at the Classical Institute of Rev. Dr. John W. Faires, where so many Philadelphians of the fifties and sixties of the last century received their early training. His art studies were begun in The Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts when J. A. Bailly was chief instructor. Going to Paris at an early age he entered L'École des Beaux Arts, for several years studying under Dumont and Grunery.

Returning to America, he opened a studio in Philadelphia at 1723 Chestnut Street and later at 1731 Chestnut Street, and modeled his first important work, a statuette of "Hester and Pearl" from Hawthorne's Scarlet Letter which was exhibited at the Academy and attracted wide attention, and "La Première Pose" modeled in Paris in 1873, Mr. Roberts spending the year in that city; this superb piece received a medal at our Centennial Exhibition of 1876, one of the three works of American sculptors to which medals were awarded, and is now in our Academy of the Fine Arts, as also "Hypatia," a memory of classic times.

Later, the structure facing Eleventh Street to the rear of the main building on Spruce Street was reconstructed so that an attractive studio was provided to which art-lovers were wont to resort.

Mr. Roberts became a member of the Sketch Club as early as the year 1861, serving successively as treasurer, vice-president and president, taking an active interest in its progress. He was a noted leader in artistic and social circles of our city.

June 1, 1876, Mr. Roberts married Miss Helen Pauline Lewis, who survives him. Their son is Howard Radcliffe Roberts, who lives at Villa Nova, Pa.

Howard Roberts achieved national reputation by his selection from a competition of thirty leading sculptors to create the statue of Robert Fulton for the rotunda in the Capitol at Washington. It is the finest conception of the distinguished Pennsylvania inventor. Many portrait busts, in which he excelled, are in homes throughout the country, an evidence of their quality and faithful portraiture. One of the most beautiful is an ideal entitled "Eleanor" which was acquired by Henry C. Gibson, and bequeathed by him to The Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, where it now rests in the special room devoted to Mr. Gibson's unrivaled collection.

Wharton Barker frequently referred to Howard Roberts as an important factor in the early years of The Penn Club, bringing grace and dignity to its gatherings and stimulating the love of art in its members and guests.

Mr. Roberts died in Paris April 18, 1900.

LEMUEL CLARKE DAVIS
1835 - 1904

LEMUEL CLARKE DAVIS

CHARTER MEMBER

LEMUEL CLARKE DAVIS was born on a farm, now the site of the City of Sandusky, Ohio, September 23, 1835. His ancestors were Welsh and Scotch-Irish; they were pioneers in Ohio, traveling to that State in Conestoga wagons while it was still inhabited by Indians.

Mr. Davis's early education was obtained at Samuel Aaron's School, near Norristown, Pa. Mr. Aaron was a scholar and an Abolitionist, and had much to do with shaping Mr. Davis's political views and literary style. Later he entered the Episcopal Academy, graduating in 1855. He entered as a student the law office of Thomas Balch, Esq., and subsequently was admitted to the Bar.

In his youth he associated with some of the brilliant men of the day, John Russell Young, afterward the associate of General Grant and later Minister to China; Francis R. Stockton, the author, and others of similar repute. In 1870 he became managing editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer and in 1889 associate editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. In 1893, upon the retirement of William V. McKean, he became editor-in-chief, a position he acceptably filled until his death, December 14, 1904.

During his years of newspaper service Mr. Davis engaged in other literary work than that of editorial writing, contributing short stories and sketches to Harper's, the Atlantic, the Century, Scribner's, Lippincott's and Putnam's, and was especially interested in the drama, some of his notable productions being dramatic criticisms and comments. These brought him in close touch with the leading actors of the day. Edwin Booth and Joseph Jefferson were intimate friends. Although a genial companion, he was not to be found at many club gatherings, a single exception being The Penn Club, where for many years he was the associate of Dr. Horace Howard Furness, president of the Club, and the distinguished author of the Variorum Edition of Shakespeare.

Mr. Davis served the State in honorary positions as a member of the commission to revise the lunacy laws, State Commissioner to the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893, and member of the Assay Commission of 1894.

The community of interest between President Grover Cleveland and Mr. Davis was that of sportsmen, both being ardent fishermen, and together with Joseph Jefferson, many days were spent with rod and reel.

His home life was simple and beautiful. His wife, Rebecca Harding Davis, was an authoress of many novels, and the three children were all writers.

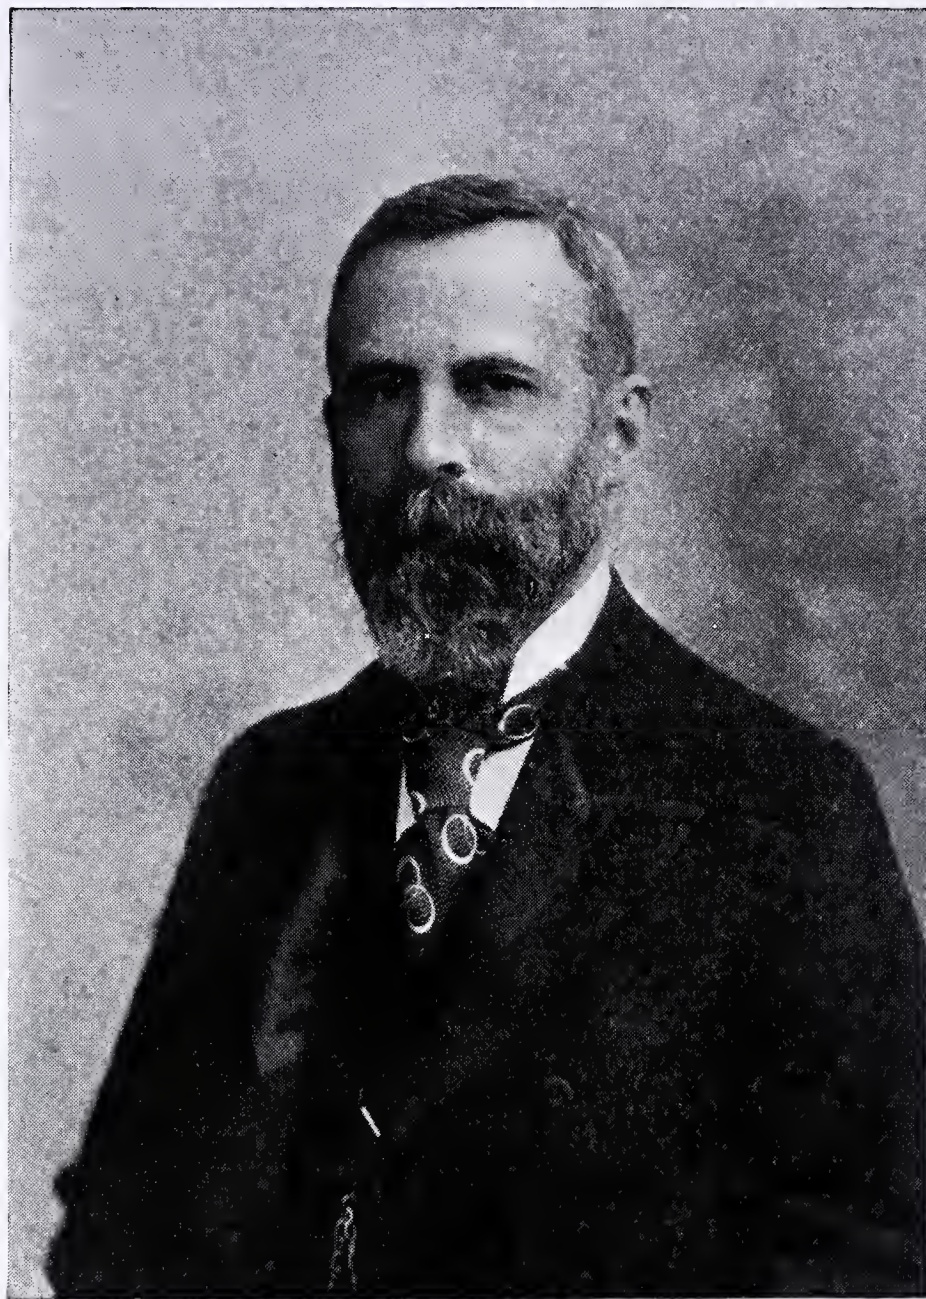

The elder son, Richard Harding Davis, won distinction as novelist and as war correspondent. The second son, Charles Belmont Davis, named after his uncle, Charles, who was killed at the battle of Belmont in the Civil War, was an author and publisher, also formerly U. S. Consul at Florence, Italy. The daughter was a contributor to many magazines.

Mr. Davis was one of the charter members of The Penn Club and served on its Board of Managers during the years 1888-93.

At the time of his death he was president and one of the oldest managers of the Edwin Forrest Home for Actors. Of the many expressions of appreciation of the quality of this eminent man that appeared in the public journals at the time of his decease, the following from our fellow-member, the late former Judge Sulzberger, conveys a general sentiment:

In the death of Mr. Davis we have lost a valuable citizen and a cultured editor. His accomplishments were great and various. A scholar, he was especially versed in dramatic literature and theatrical criticism. His ideals of personal and civic morals were of the highest, and he never failed to hold up for admiration the best standards of private and public conduct. An editorial writer of great facility and elegance, he always strove to maintain in the newspapers which he managed the best tone for the betterment of conduct. Of a most sociable and lovable disposition, he had the rare felicity to preserve to the last a juvenile simplicity and gaiety which made him a welcome companion and warm friend to men of all ages.

A rare man!

B. FRANK CLAPP
1854 - 1914

B. FRANK CLAPP

CHARTER MEMBER

Among Philadelphia's leading attorneys of a few years since must be numbered the late B. Frank Clapp. All that made for the advancement of his city found in Mr. Clapp a warm supporter. He left a record that the city is proud of. Mr. Clapp was a descendant of the old Clapp family of New England, the immigrant ancestor in his line being Nicholas Clapp.

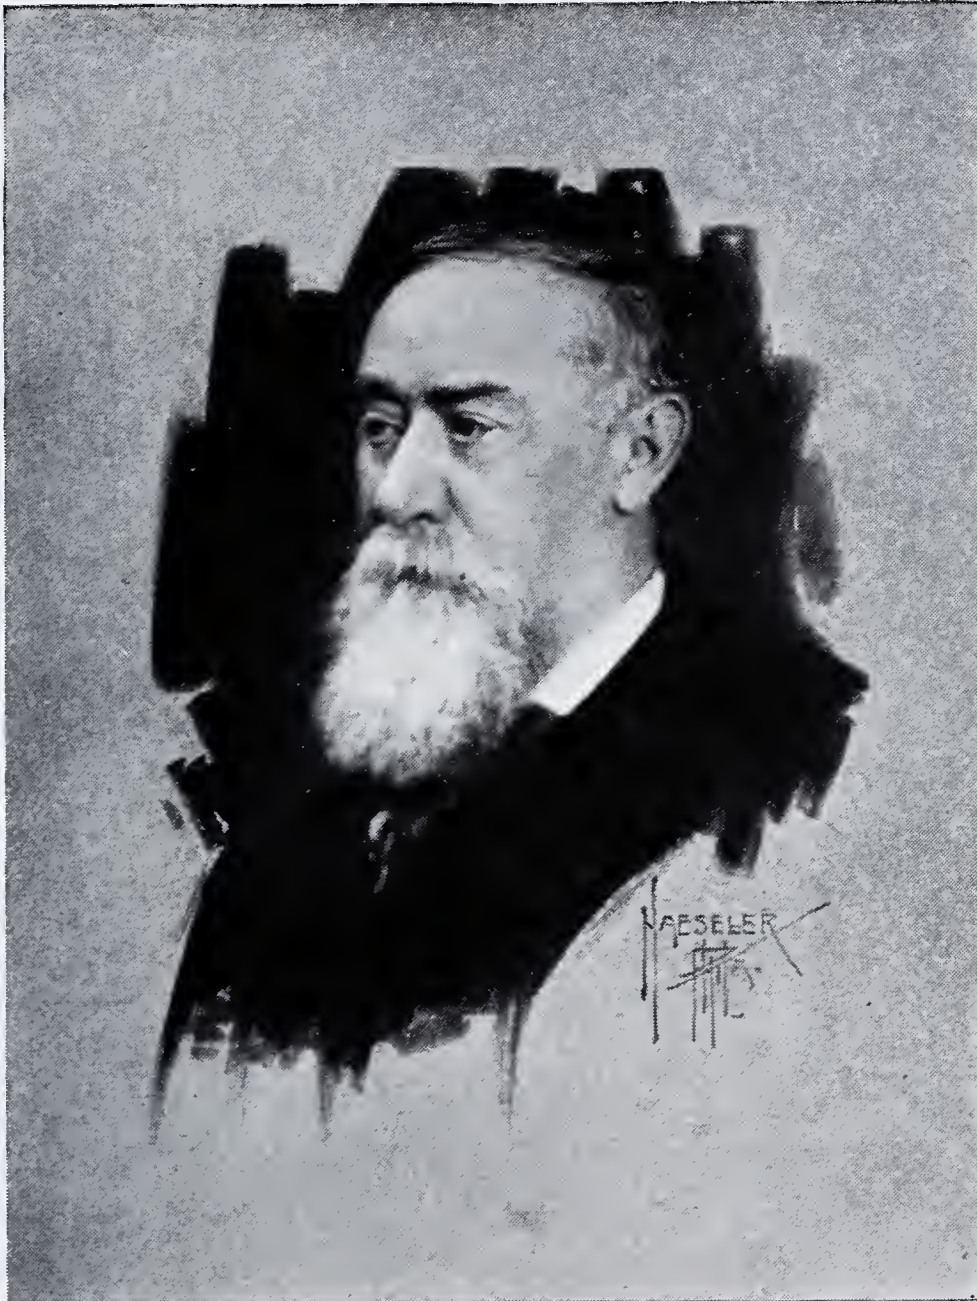

Nathan Tyson Clapp, son of Enoch and Mary (Tyson) Clapp, was born June 27, 1819. He married Sarah Roberts, daughter of John and Sarah (Jones) Roberts, of Philadelphia. John Roberts was a son of Algernon Roberts, born in 1751, lieutenant-colonel of the Seventh Philadelphia Battalion; he married Tacy Warner, daughter of Colonel Warner. Nathan Tyson and Sarah (Roberts) Clapp were the parents of two children: Lydia Roberts, widow of Matthew Sample, of Philadelphia, who died July 6, 1900; and B. Frank, of whom further.

B. Frank Clapp, son of Nathan Tyson and Sarah (Roberts) Clapp, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., August 5, 1854. He was educated in Philadelphia at the Classical Institute of Rev. Dr. Faires, and the Episcopal Academy. Deciding to make law his profession, he entered the law offices of Hon. F. Carroll Brewster, and was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania as LL.B. in 1876. He was admitted to the Bar of Philadelphia in 1876, and from that time until his death was active in the pursuit of his profession. Possessing thorough equipment, enforced by innate ability and unremitting devotion to duty, Mr. Clapp made for himself, entirely by his own efforts, a place of high standing among his professional brethren. Thorough and painstaking in the preparation of his cases, he was clear and forceful in their presentation, his arguments being remarkable for depth of insight and lucidity of expression. Mr. Clapp was secretary of the Law Association of Philadelphia from 1891 until 1899; in politics a Republican; a member of the Board of Council of the Philadelphia Protestant Episcopal City Mission; and treasurer of the Eighth and Ninth Wards Charity Organization. Mr. Clapp was a member of The Union League, the University Club, and for a number of years of the Philadelphia Country Club, and was also a charter member of The Penn Club. He was a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, American Academy of Political and Social Science, and the Sons of the American Revolution. He was for many years a vestryman of St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church of Philadelphia.

The personality of B. Frank Clapp was that of the true lawyer—strong and at the same time magnetic. He had the legal mind to appreciate formal logic, exact statements and nice distinctions, and delighting in the formation of principles and the definition of rights and duties. Considerate and courteous, he always conveyed the impression that behind his genial exterior he possessed an underlying foundation of keen business sense and administrative ability.

Mr. Clapp married, in Philadelphia, October 23, 1895, Clara, daughter of Alfred and Martha (Cummins) Barratt, and they were the parents of a son, Algernon Roberts, born August 30, 1896. Mr. Clapp was peculiarly happy in his domestic relations, and was essentially a home-lover, devoted to his family and delighting in the exercise of hospitality.

The death of B. Frank Clapp, which occurred February 11, 1914, deprived Philadelphia of a talented professional man and a public-spirited and most benevolent citizen, one whose life was crowned with merited success—success which was entirely the product of his own natural forces and sterling ability. As an attorney and citizen he is remembered with admiration and esteem, his record having enriched the annals of his city, but it is chiefly as “one who loved his fellow-men” that his memory is cherished in the hearts of those who knew and loved him.

JOHN ALEXANDER CLARK
1835 - 1909

JOHN ALEXANDER CLARK

CHARTER MEMBER

JOHN ALEXANDER CLARK was born in Providence, R. I., April 4, 1835, his father, the Rev. John Alonzo Clark, D.D., being at that time rector of Grace Protestant Episcopal Church in Providence. His mother was Sarah Buell Clark, his grandmother on his paternal side being Chloe Atwater and on his maternal side Sarah Griswold. It was said that both the intellect and the frail health of the family came from Chloe Atwater Clark.

John's middle name "Alexander" was given him in honor of his uncle, the Hon. Alexander Buell, a member of the U. S. Senate and a citizen of Utica, N. Y. His paternal ancestors came from Haddam, Mass., where they settled after arriving on the "Mayflower."

His grandfather, John Clark, fought in the Revolutionary Battle of Oriskany, in New York.

His mother's family, the Buells and Griswolds, came from the village of Fairfield, Herkimer County, N. Y., where his father, John Alonzo Clark, attended school and met his wife, Sarah Buell.

When John was a year old his father, with his family, moved to Philadelphia and became rector of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church on Eighth above Spruce Street, where a white marble tablet is hung in memory of his ministry and piety.

For a number of years John lived with his mother at 735 Sansom Street.

In Fairfield, N. Y., John spent many happy years of his boyhood. In this village the birthplace of his mother is still standing. In Philadelphia John attended school at the Episcopal Academy, then under Dr. Hare. One of his school friends was Rev. Henry Potter, later Bishop of New York. Henry Potter came to John's house on Sansom Street every Sunday afternoon to get John to write his Biblical exercises for him, and the Bishop often referred to this in later life. John next went to Yale University. While in New Haven, Conn., he lived with the family of his classmate, John Dunn, who later was the rector of an Episcopal church in Kansas. He was in the Class of 1855. John then studied law at the University of Pennsylvania, later in the office of E. Spencer Miller, Esq., upon whose motion, May 24, 1856, he was admitted to the Bar.

In 1876 he was a member of Common Council and appointed chairman of the Finance Committee. Upon his retirement a diploma was presented in recognition of his faithful services to the city.

Mr. Clark was at one time president of the Medical Jurisprudence Society and of the German-American Society, also a member of the Board of School Directors of the Fifteenth Ward. He was a member of the City Parks Association, secretary and president of The Penn Club and a member of The Union League. He was at one time a vestryman of St. Andrew's Church, Eighth Street, above Spruce. He wrote Clark's Pennsylvania Cases, a standard law book. A member of the Masonic Order, he was also a Knight Templar in Kadosh Commandery. When twenty-six years of age he purchased a house and large garden near Fairmount Park, now considered valuable as adjacent to the Parkway.

Mr. Clark was highly respected by the members of the Board of Judges, not only for his scholarly attainments but for his high moral character which had stood the test of many years, both in his professional and in his social career.

His favorite book was Horace in the original Greek, to which he usually resorted when modern literature failed to satisfy.

Of a sympathetic and generous disposition, he was devoted to his family and had hosts of admiring friends. His widow, who still survives, was Eugenie Augusta Robnett. Mr. Clark died May 5, 1909.

FRANCIS HOWARD WILLIAMS
1844 - 1922

FRANCIS HOWARD WILLIAMS

CHARTER MEMBER

FRANCIS HOWARD WILLIAMS was born in Philadelphia, September 2, 1844. His mother was Martha Paul Shoemaker, daughter of Dr. Nathan Shoemaker, whose ancestors settled Shoemakertown, now Ogontz, about the time of the founding of Germantown.

Mr. Williams' early education was under private tutors and in the year 1855 he entered Baldwin's Classical School at Broad and Arch Streets, from which he was graduated in 1860, and in 1865 he was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. For several years he was interested in commercial enterprises consisting of lumber and wool, and later represented the American Surety Company in Philadelphia. But his taste was for literature, and his love of writing began to manifest itself in poems and articles for the daily press and magazines, these writings continuing for a decade before he attempted more ambitious work.

As an author his productions cover a wide range of subjects from the lyric drama as exemplified in "Princess Elizabeth" to "The Burden Bearer," an epic of Lincoln. Mr. Williams was a founder of the Welcome Society, made up of the descendants of those who came over with William Penn in the little ship which came up the Delaware in 1682, Williams himself being a descendant of Dr. Thomas Wynne, a passenger on that ship. He was president of the Society.

Of his many activities may be mentioned his life membership in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, since 1879; auditor from 1894 to 1898, and treasurer from the latter year to the time of his demise, and always active in the Council of the Society, its governing body. From its inception Mr. Williams was connected with the Franklin Inn, being for many years its vice-president. A member of the Walt Whitman Fellowship International, which was founded in the early eighties to interest the public in his work, he was a frequent visitor to the home of the good gray poet and was one of those friends who came to his relief in his declining years. At the grave of the poet, Mr. Williams took part and read one of his verses composed for the occasion.

As vice-president of the Browning Society he contributed many important papers and participated in the discussions that arose in the meetings of that eminent literary society.

He was a director of the Mercantile Library Company and chairman of its book committee; member of the Phi Beta Kappa, to which he was elected on account of an ode which he had written and which was read before the society.

He was deputy treasurer of the Society of Colonial Wars, a member of the Authors' Club of New York, the Pegasus, the Contemporary and the University Clubs of Philadelphia, the American Institute of Arts and Letters, and the Dickens Fellowship of London.

In 1865 Mr. Williams married Mary, daughter of the late William Churchill Houston, a noted cotton merchant of Philadelphia.

Mr. Williams died June 18, 1922, at his home in Germantown, and is survived by three sons, Francis Churchill Williams, editor and author; Aubrey Howard Williams; Doctor Gurney Williams; and a daughter, Mrs. Balthazar de Mare.

ISAAC MYER
1836 – 1902

ISAAC MYER
CHARTER MEMBER

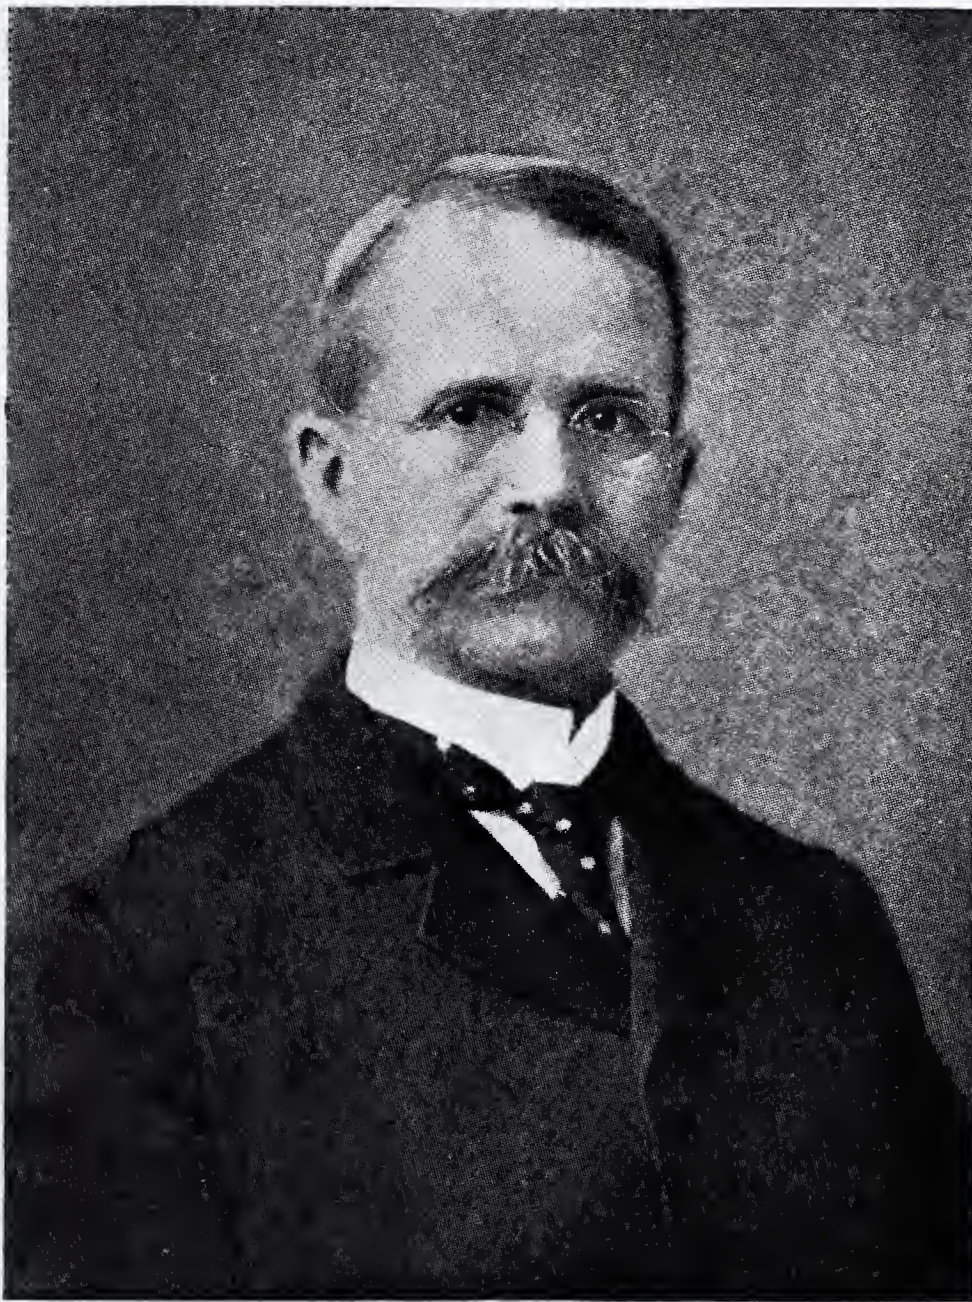

ISAAC MYER was born in Philadelphia, March 5, 1836.

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law Department in 1857, he was admitted to the Pennsylvania Bar, and in 1889 to the New York Bar.

At one time Mr. Myer was a United States Commissioner for Pennsylvania. A frequent contributor to magazines, he was especially interested in Ancient Egyptian subjects, his articles appearing in Monumental Records of New York. His membership in scientific bodies included the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Philadelphia; Société Royale de Numismatique de Belgique; American Oriental Society; New York Historical Society; Historical Society of Pennsylvania; Society of American Authors. Of his literary productions may be mentioned: Presidential Power Over Personal Liberty, 1862; The Waterloo Medal, 1885; The Qabalah; the Philosophical Writings of Solomon Ben Yehudah; The Philosophy of Ibn Gebirol or Avicbron, 1888; On Dreams, by Synesius, 1888; Scarabs, 1894; The Oldest Books in the World; Taken from Papyri and Monuments, 1900.

In June, 1889, Mr. Myer married Mrs. Mary H. Sharpsteen (née Abbott) a former Philadelphian; they resided in New York at 21 East Sixtieth Street, where Mr. Myer died, August 2, 1902. His niece is Mrs. William H. Horstmann, to whom we are indebted for the reproduction of his portrait.

WALTER EDWIN REX
1847 - 1916

WALTER EDWIN REX

CHARTER MEMBER

WALTER EDWIN REX was born in Philadelphia, April 10, 1847, son of George Valentine and Mary Catharine (Lentz) Rex. John Rex, his grandfather, was a son of Abraham, and the latter a son of George Rex, who emigrated from Crefeld, Germany, in 1691, settling at Chestnut Hill.

On the maternal side Walter E. Rex is a descendant of John Jacob Shutz, now Sheetz, who with others purchased of William Penn many acres of land in Germantown, and from him and his associates Francis Daniel Pastorius received a power of attorney for the purpose of disposing of lots to settlers.

Mr. Rex attended the public schools, graduating from the Central High School as Bachelor of Arts in 1864, and continued his education under private preceptors.

Prior to entering upon his legal studies he engaged in mercantile pursuits for the special purpose of acquiring a knowledge of business methods, and then registered as a student of law in the office of Frank Wolfe, Esq. In 1873 he entered the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, graduating in 1875 with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Admitted to the Bar, he entered into active practice and from 1879 to 1882 he was a member of the Common Council of Philadelphia, serving as chairman of the Survey Committee and as a member of the Committee on Finance and Water Supply.

In November, 1882, he was elected register of wills, serving from January, 1883, to January, 1886.

Mr. Rex was a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, The Union League of Philadelphia, and The Philadelphia Cricket Club. In leisure moments he made a special study of intricate legal questions, in the year 1888 reading an important paper upon "Will Contests" before the Philadelphia Medico Legal Society.

October 28, 1885, Mr. Rex married Isabel Tolbert Emory. Mr. Rex died at Philadelphia July 18, 1916.

EDWARD RANDOLPH WOOD
1840 -

EDWARD RANDOLPH WOOD

PRESIDENT, 1910 - 1915

EDWARD RANDOLPH WOOD was born in Philadelphia, June 21, 1840, of good "old stock Quaker parents." "On the 21st June, 1846, at an early hour he was driven down the 'Neck' so as to get the fresh air which at that time circulated over that rural district." Then it was that his attention was directed to a long-legged blue bird—a heron.

In 1852, when twelve years of age, he entered Haverford and graduated therefrom [with A.B. in 1856 and A.M. in 1859], followed by an indenture as a law student in the office of Peter McCall, Esq., where the refinement of manner and general intellectuality of surroundings made a marked impression upon all those privileged to come under the influence of their preceptor.

Before receiving his baccalaureate degree in law from the University of Pennsylvania, young Wood made a long and wide tour through Western and Southern Europe, where he was an early observer of those political conditions foreshadowing a United Italy. On his return to this country he was sent on a mission to the Southwest leading into the path of the marching armies during the Civil War, and at Jackson, Tenn., in an interview with Major-General Ulysses S. Grant, then in command of the Military Division of the Mississippi, he was threatened with arrest as a rebel spy, but was soon able to prove his entire innocence to the satisfaction of the military authorities.

Later, in that section of the country, he had further experiences in the military life of the period, but incidentally paved the way leading to the main source of his happiness in these declining years.

About the year 1870 he was called upon to administer the estate of his father (recently deceased), which was of large value and was distributed to all the many parties in interest to their complete satisfaction, a feat not easy of accomplishment, which indicates ability and sound judgment.

In the year 1866 Mr. Wood was married to Mary Honeyman Kneass at Lambertville, N. J., a union which lasted happily until 1899.

In 1867 Mr. Wood became a member of the Executive Council of the Philadelphia Board of Trade and for more than fifty years has been active in promoting the commercial interests of his native city, as also taking an important part in general government affairs when affiliated with the National Board of Trade in Washington, and it was during this affiliation that he advocated with much energy the creation of the cabinet office of Secretary of Commerce, which has been of so great value to business interests throughout the country.

Mr. Wood was one of the group of young men who helped to form The Penn Club, for he recalls vividly the interest taken by Henry Armitt Brown, Horace Howard Furness, Morton McMichael, Jr., and especially Wharton Barker, who, he asserts, was the most active spirit in bringing the Club to life.

Mr. Wood has contributed many articles on the tariff and similar topics to newspaper and magazine literature of the period, and has been frequently called upon to indite clear and forceful resolutions upon the problems of the hour when occasion demanded.

Whilst pondering on the destiny of man these thoughts in metrical form have been published recently and should meet with favor from the discriminating public.

Referring to his mission to the Southwest in the early years of the Civil War, Mr. Wood alludes to an incident which paved the way to happiness; this was his meeting Miss Erma Richardson, daughter of James M. Richardson, of Memphis, Tenn., to whom he was married at Asheville, N. C., December 24, 1919.

WILLIAM H. STAAKE
1846 -

WILLIAM H. STAAKE

PRESIDENT, 1916

WILLIAM H. STAAKE was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., December 5, 1846. Receiving his early education in the public school, he entered the Central High School at Philadelphia, graduating in 1865, proceeding thence to the University of Pennsylvania. He received the degree of LL.B. and was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar March 14, 1868.

After a successful practice in the Courts of Philadelphia County, in 1906 he became judge of the Court of Common Pleas No. 5, a position he still retains, to the honor of the judiciary and to the satisfaction of his fellow-citizens.

Judge Staake has served the community in many directions, and of his varied activities may be enumerated membership as Commissioner on Uniform State Laws, being chairman of the executive committee and president during the years 1915 and 1916; secretary and delegate of the National Divorce Congress and interested in the endeavor to codify the divorce laws of Pennsylvania.

He was secretary of the board having charge of Independence Hall with its museums and collections, a work that has proven of great value in the restoration and preservation of this historic building. He has served as a member of the Civil Service Examining Board and a director of the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark, N. J., and the Fidelity Title and Trust Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.

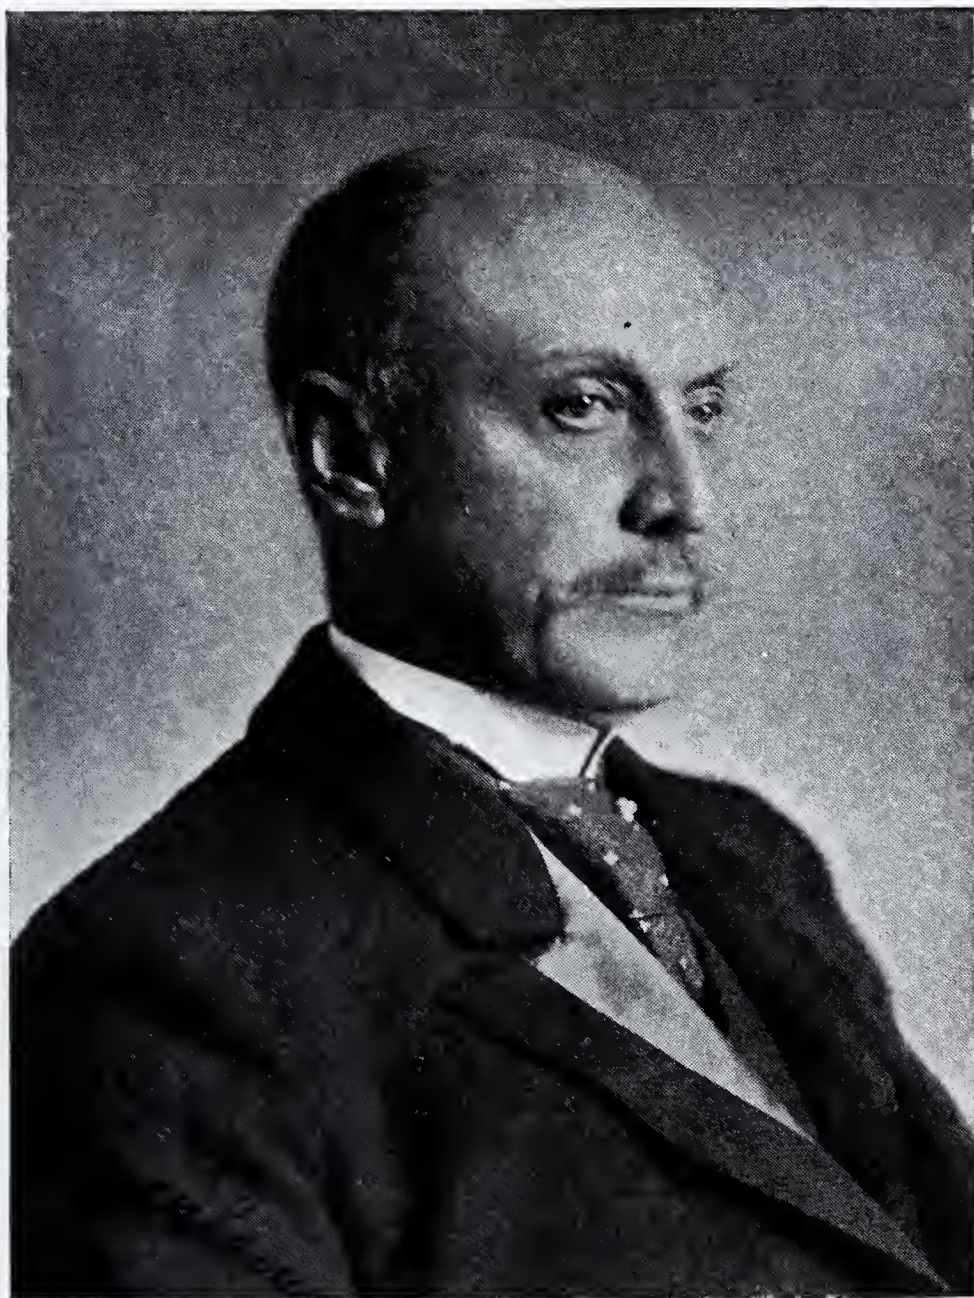

His interest in the social welfare of the community is evidenced by his serving as president in institutions of recognized importance; the Mary J. Drexel Home and Philadelphia Mother House of Deaconesses and the Maternity Hospital of Philadelphia; also as trustee of the Rush Hospital for Consumptives; member of the Advisory Committee of the Philadelphia Home for Incurables and of the Board of Managers of the Philadelphia House of Refuge. For thirty years he has been a member of the Council of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Holy Communion and is now its vice-president.

Of his professional engagements there is the secretaryship of the Pennsylvania Bar Association; membership in the General Council from Pennsylvania in the American Bar Association, acting on the executive committee 1912-14; chairman of the Board of Law Examiners, and of the Library Commission, Law Association, 1900-02.

As a citizen he is a member of the Horticultural Society; the Historical Society of Pennsylvania; the Lawyers' Club, of which he is now vice-president.

In addition to his membership in The Penn Club, in which he has always taken a very active interest, he is a member of The Union League, The Five O'Clock, The Athletic and the Philadelphia Rifle Clubs.

Notwithstanding all these vitally important adjuncts to his professional career, he has contributed many papers upon the topics of the day and an important work entitled Centennial History of the Magdalen Society of Philadelphia, 1900, and Functions and Duties of Probation Officers.

HON. CHARLEMAGNE TOWER
1848 - 1923

HON. CHARLEMAGNE TOWER

PRESIDENT, 1917-1921

CHARLEMAGNE TOWER was born at Philadelphia April 17, 1848, of English ancestry.

He was educated at Phillips Exeter Academy and was graduated from Harvard University in the Class of 1872. He studied law in the office of William Henry Rawle, Esq., and was admitted to the Bar in 1878.

Mr. Tower was managing director of the Minnesota Iron Company and president of the Duluth and Iron Range Railroad Company; president of the Finance Company of Pennsylvania; a member of the Board of City Trusts; president of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania; a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania; and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Drexel Institute, of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and of Hamilton College and Colgate University. He was also a member of the Board of Directors of the Fidelity Trust Company and of the Commercial Trust Company, and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. He was appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Austria-Hungary in 1897; Ambassador to Russia in 1899; and was Ambassador to Germany from 1902 to 1908.

Mr. Tower received the degree of LL.D. from Lafayette College, from Hamilton College and from the University of Chicago; also from the Scotch Universities of Glasgow and Saint Andrew's.

He published a volume of Essays Political and Historical, a pamphlet on The Origin, Meaning and International Force of the Monroe Doctrine, and a work entitled, The Marquis de La Fayette in the American Revolution. This book has been translated into French, and in recognition of it the Government of France conferred upon Mr. Tower the dignity of a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor, in the year 1901.

Mr. Tower died at Philadelphia February 24, 1923.

THE GREEKS AT THE PENN CLUB

"The hospitalities of The Penn Club were fully enjoyed and appreciated on Friday evening by its guests, the gentlemen connected with the production of 'The Acharnians.' It was a gala night for men of the University, all the branches of whose interests were represented—its Board of Trustees, Faculties, Alumni and Undergraduates. The affair was rendered doubly pleasant by the presentation of silver cups, of simple but chaste designs of Greek art, to the three prominent guests of the evening, and the gentlemen upon whom most of the work of the play devolved—Doctors Easton, Clarke and Klapp. Mr. Furness opened the ball with a witty speech full of pertinent allusions, which were received with great applause, and moreover was so inspired by the intellectuality and Hellenism of those present as to indulge his Attic wit in jokes in the original Greek. At the conclusion of Mr. Furness's remarks, Provost Pepper arose, and turning to the three distinguished guests of the evening, with a few well-chosen words, made the presentation to them of the testimonials given in appreciation of their labors. These gentlemen had heard nothing of what was coming, and their faces witnessed their innocent surprise and gratification. It was the order of the evening that there should be no responses, and after the chorus had sung some selections from 'The Acharnians,' all adjourned to the supper room. It was about a year since the first rehearsals of the play began and the pleasure of all was enhanced by the recollection of that time of anxiety and labor. The only thing that marred the evening's joy was the absence of Dicaeopolis,* who has been so infused with the Greek spirit that he must needs have an affection of the πλεῦρα. It was late before the reception closed, and the thanks of the University must be tendered to the hosts who have so fittingly terminated an eventful year."

Professor William N. Bates, University of Pennsylvania, writes as follows:

"‘The Acharnians’ is the earliest of the extant comedies of Aristophanes. It was brought out in the year 425 B. C., that is, in the sixth year of the Peloponnesian War. The hero of the play named Dicaeopolis (played by George Wharton Pepper) is determined to block all legislation until peace is made; but his plans are not successful, and he arranges to make peace with the Spartans for himself alone. The men of the town of Acharnae, well-to-do farmers and charcoal-burners, will hear of nothing except that the Spartans must be soundly thrashed. The Chorus in the play, consisting of twenty-four Acharnians, find out what Dicaeopolis is up to and make trouble for him. The rest of the comedy has to do with the struggles between Dicaeopolis and the Chorus. The advantages of war and peace are set forth in ludicrous fashion, and at the end of the play the general Lamachus, the exponent of war, is brought in wounded and lamenting, while Dicaeopolis comes in tipsy and singing, with a dancing girl on either arm."

Senator George Wharton Pepper writes from Washington:

"In 1886 students of the University of Pennsylvania produced in the original Greek a comedy by Aristophanes entitled ‘The Acharnians.’

"Two performances were given in May of that year in the Academy of Music in Philadelphia and one in November of the same year in the Academy of Music in New York. The net receipts of all the performances went to the use of the American School at Athens.

"The music for the play was written by Professor Hugh Clarke of the University of Pennsylvania, and the training of the actors and the supervision of the whole enterprise was in the hands of the late Professor Morton W. Easton.

"As I was a member of the cast I recall the reception at Penn Club to which your letter refers. The silver vase filled with gold coins was presented by Dr. Horace Howard Furness on behalf of friends of the University to Dr. Easton as a token of appreciation of his services."

In commenting upon the performance of ‘The Acharnians’ a classicist wrote in the Public Ledger in December, 1886, as follows:

CONCERNING THE GREEK DRAMA

"The plays of Aristophanes dealt with the living questions of his day, and to rightly appreciate them requires some knowledge of the political, social and dramatic conditions of the people who represented the flower of the old civilization. The Greek drama originated in religious festivals. On these occasions bands of men, disguised as satyrs, or in reveling attire, chanted odes reciting the mythologies on which the rites were based, accompanied either by stately marches or wild and riotous dancing. In the course of time the subject-matter of the odes took a wider range, and the chorus was divided into two sections, each sustaining a part of the action, and the way opened for dramatic discourse and plot. Thespis, of Icaria, first introduced a single actor with a part for himself, and from this we derive the word 'Thespian' as applied to the actor's profession. At first the actor was introduced in order to break the performance of the chorus into convenient parts, giving the singers time to rest while he pronounced his monologue. In the course of time other actors were introduced into the play, and its most vivid interest centered in their individual parts, and it became the business of the chorus rather to rest them. Neither stage facilities nor the natural refinement of the Greek mind would permit a horrid murder scene upon the boards. Medea tells us of her purpose to kill her children and goes off to do it. The chorus tells us what is being done in the awful interval of her absence, and in due time she returns to perform what may be shown before the public. . . .

"The Dionysian odes were at first performed wherever an altar stood, and the few spectators formed a circle around the chosen chorus. But as the odes lengthened with wider range of subject and more elaborate treatment, a level spot was chosen for the performance near a sloping hillside, where men and women might recline. As population increased and larger multitudes assembled, and particularly when a single voice alone sustained some parts, an enclosed glen in the hillside became the most fitting place. Then came the terracing of the ascending slope, the hewing out from the rocky hillsides of seats, and at last the regular structure, sometimes partly natural and sometimes altogether of massive masonry, in which the same general plan was followed, a great semi-circle of rows of seats rising one above another in larger curves until the highest far overlooked the wall, which as a diameter of the circle formed the back wall of the stage. There was no roof to this structure. Only at a late date was there any attempt at scenery, and this when used was only one piece for a whole play, either an interior, a street scene as in 'The Acharnians,' or a grove. . . . When a single actor performed he often had to take several parts. This was conveniently done by his having several masks at hand, representing the person desired, and he had only to hold one or the other up to his face to speak through it to represent Shylock or Bassanio at will. This speaking through (personare) the mask gives us our words 'person' and 'to personate.' Even after actors became sufficiently numerous the masks proper to each character were retained, and no one presumed to appear in his proper face or to make any use of facial expression, for one stony countenance was found in the property room of every theatre which for all moods and tenses belonged expressly to that character.

"The University representation was a wise and judicious medium between the ancient and our modern form. All that could be represented of the Attic Drama and its surroundings was used there, but it is probable that Aristophanes never saw or heard his own works rendered with the fullness and expression which, in our enclosed theatres and with the freedom of personal action permitted in our day, is now attainable. In his time the outdoor theatre might hold twenty thousand people, all of them on the 'free list.' There were no librettos sold, for either the play was a tragedy—one of the old stories which everybody knew—or else it was a comedy, and dealt with what everybody knew as the people and things of the day. There was no brighter writer of these comedies than Aristophanes, and last week's performance showed that the old Attic salt has not lost its savor, but that after two thousand years, and even though 'all Greek' to most of the hearers, his plays can be so rendered and so clothed with modern harmonies as to form a delightful entertainment to a cultivated audience."

OFFICERS OF FIRST CITY TROOP OF PHILADELPHIA

FIRST TROOP PHILADELPHIA CITY CAVALRY

(From "The Cuban and Porto Rican Campaigns," by Richard Harding Davis; Copyright, 1898, by Charles Scribner's Sons. By permission of the publishers)

October 13, 1898. "The Troop attended, in khaki uniform, a reception given in its honor by the Penn Club at the Club House, Eighth and Locust Streets. The reception was attended by many distinguished citizens, by foreign army and navy officers, and officers of the United States Army and Navy." (From the History of the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry.)

ORIGIN OF THE FIRST TROOP PHILADELPHIA CITY CAVALRY

In Carpenter's Hall, Chestnut Street above Third, was held on September 5, 1774, the first meeting of the delegates to a Congress.

On Thursday, November 17, 1774, a meeting of 28 gentlemen was called in Carpenter's Hall "to form a troop of light horse to maintain the rights of the people against the continued oppression of the British Government."

During the Revolutionary War the Troop furnished a brigadier-general three colonels, two lieutenant-colonels, four majors, four captains and four captains in the Navy.

During the Civil War, 1861-65, the Troop took an active part in the field. Many of those bearing honored names entered Government ranks and did valiant service through various campaigns.

At the Battle of Gettysburg, owing to the advanced position occupied by the Troop, the State was unable to furnish supplies, so that subsistence had to be obtained from the surrounding towns and villages, which the Troop acknowledged in fitting terms, expressing gratitude for the generous action of the citizens.

"ARMORY"

1874. "Eli K. Price, Esq. [grandfather of our present Eli Kirk Price, Esq.], was created an honorary member for services generously given in the matter of the title to the Armory lot."

Art critic and director. Born in Gloucestershire, England. Educated at South Kensington, London. Was one of the first to enter new School of Design and Training School for Teachers and became the “greatest art educator of his time.”

1860. Established and developed Government Schools of Art in Leeds, Bradford, Wakefield, Halifax and Keighley, making Yorkshire the seat of the leading textile industry of the world.

1871. Massachusetts Board of Education invited Mr. Smith to take charge of art education in that State.

1873. Founded Massachusetts Normal Art School, first of its kind in America, and became its first principal. His most distinguished pupil is Leslie W. Miller, LL.D., for forty years principal of the School of Industrial Art of Philadelphia, and for several decades honorary secretary of the Fairmount Park Art Association and a member of its Board of Trustees.

The delegation from Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Art consisted of Frederick Graff and Dalton Dorr; they visited Professor Smith in Boston, who, in response to their solicitation, prepared an elaborate program but suggested that Leslie W. Miller, a young man then teaching at State Normal School in Salem, should be tendered the position of principal for the Philadelphia institution, being assured that his personal qualifications, added to his educational attainments, were a better guarantee of success than any written program; so the latter was not adopted, but Mr. Miller was engaged with the results as noted above.

The late William W. Justice, a trustee of the Philadelphia School, narrated this incident.
